

SILVER JUBILEE PUBLICATION SERIES-2

CONTRIBUTION OF MITHILĀ TO SĀNSKR̥T KĀVYA AND SĀHITYAŚĀSTRĀ

TRILOKANĀTHA JHĀ

RASHTRIYA SANSKRIT SANSTHAN

The book presents a brief overview of the contribution of Mithila's Kāvya and Sāhitya Śāstra. It introduces the authors and their works related to different branches of Sāhitya such as Poetry, Prose, Campū, Drama, Poetics and Prosody.

An attempt is made to include the recent works and the author has also tried to examine the date of the writers of Mithila Province.

१०१

आशुतोष अस्थी

अध्याय

श्री नारायणेश्वर व. वेढाड गमिति (स प्र.)

SILVER JUBILEE PUBLICATION SERIES - 2

CONTRIBUTION OF MITHILĀ TO SANSKRT KĀVYA AND SĀHITYAŚĀSTRA

CONTRIBUTION OF MITHILA TO BANGALAY KAVYA AND SANSKRIT KAVYA

BY
DR. K. C. PANDE
Professor of Sanskrit,
University of Calcutta

SILVER JUBILEE PUBLICATION SERIES - 2

CONTRIBUTION OF MITHILĀ TO
SAṆSKṚT KĀVYA AND SĀHITYAŚĀSTRA

आशुतोष अवस्थी
अध्यक्ष
श्री नारायणगुरु उद वेदाङ्ग सौमति (उप.)

TRILOKANĀTHA JHĀ

RASHTRIYA SANSKRIT SANSTHAN
NEW DELHI
1995

Publisher :

Dr. Kamlakant Mishra
Director,
Rashtriya Sanskrit Sansthan,
A-40, Vishal Enclave, Raja Garden,
New Delhi-110027.

© Rashtriya Sanskrit Sansthan

Silver Jubilee Publication Series

FIRST EDITION : 1995

VIKRAM SAMVAT : 2052

Price : Rs 5 0 0 0

Printer :

NAG PUBLISHERS
11A/U.A. (Post Office Building),
Jawahar Nagar, Delhi 110 007.

FOREWORD

I have great pleasure to present this volume of Silver Jubilee Publication Series of the Rashtriya Sanskrit Sansthan to our esteemed readers. The Volume varily represents the goodwill and cooperation, the Sansthan has all along been receiving from the distinguished scholars all over the country.

The Sansthan was established in October, 1970 as an autonomous apex body under the Ministry of Human Resource Development, Govt. of India with a view to promoting, preserving and propagating Sanskrit learning in all its aspects, with special reference to the indepth shastraic learning. Apart from conducting the regular courses of studies at the various constituent Vidyapeethas, it has been bringing out invaluable publications representing dissemination of knowledge contained in the Shastras.

Thanks to the continued help, encouragement and support from the Ministry of Human Resource Development, Govt. of India that the Sansthan has grown by leaps and bounds and has been able to render its services to promotion of Sanskrit learning at national and international levels and is now completing its 25th year. It is quite in the fitness of things that the Sansthan decided to bring out 25 scholarly monographs in commomeration of the Silver Jubilee year of the Sansthan.

The present monograph is a unique one of its kind. It gives an authentic and ready information of the scholars of Mithila and their contribution to Kavya and Sahitya Shastra. Here the learned author Dr. Trilokanatha Jha took much pain to include the contemporary contributions also.

I express my sincere thanks to Prof. T.N. Jha, former Head of the Department of Sanskrit, L.N. Mithila University, Darbhanga, who has kindly consented to contribute this scholarly work on this auspicious occasion.

It is my duty to mention the services rendered by my colleagues specially Dr. Savita Pathak and Dr. R. Devanathan for organising the various academic programmes particularly the publication of the Silver Jubilee Series.

My thanks are also due to M/s Nag Publishers, who have worked hard to bring out the monograph in time and enabled us to release the same on the Valedictory function of the Silver Jubilee Celebrations.

K.K.MISHRA

Dt. 11.10.1995

Director
Rashtriya Sanskrit Sansthan
New Delhi

PREFACE

Mithilā, the land of Janaka, hardly requires any introduction to a student of Sanskrit. For, it has carved a niche for itself in the temple of Sanskrit learning. Since time immemorial thousands of sons and daughters of the soil have been enriching Sanskrit by their valuable contributions to different branches of knowledge - philosophy and grammar, smṛti and dharmasāstra, astronomy and astrology, poetry and prose, campū and drama, rhetoric and prosody, poetics and drama-turgy, music and dance, lexicon and anthology, tantra and rituals, politics and erotics etc. Many of them polyhistor famous for their versatility. They all led a life dedicated to learning and received the highest distinction in the academic field. They kept the glow of intellectual luminosity undiminished through the ages and brought an unstinted praise - an undying fame for their place of birth.

Showering encomiums for one's own state of origin can be treated as a spontaneous overflow of patriotic feelings but the words of a scholar of a neighbouring state extolling his neighbouring state to the skies cannot be dismissed with facile flippancy. Kavikarṇapūra of Bengal pays glowing tributes to Mithilā in his Pārijātaharaṇamahā kāvya. He says :-

“O Lotus-eyed one! behold yonder this is Mithilā, the birth place of Jānakī. Here the goddess of learning dances with pride on the tip of the tongue of the learned. (XVII-59)

The above eulogistic reference to Mithilā may in verse. We have attempted to discuss them seriatim.

We take this opportunity to express our deepest gratitude to one and all, who have wielded their pen on Mithilā. We are thankful to Dr. K.K. Mishra, Director, Rashtriya Sanskrit Sansthan, New Delhi, at whose instance the present monograph has been prepared.

Since the time at our disposal was less than two months, it will be preposterous to claim that the present volume is comprehensive and it contains all that is required. Naturally, it must suffer from omissions and commissions and for these we are solely responsible. We, however, crave the indulgence of Sahṛdaya-readers to pick up the solid grains of information and discard the chaff. For,

“hamso hi kṣīram ādatte tanmiśrā varjayatya’palī”

We shall remain grateful to all readers who extend their co-operation by suggesting emendations for the better. We feel, we have been a bit liberal in assessing compositions but we have not ignored their defects totally. In defence of our assessment let us quote what Śrīharṣa says in the Naiṣadhīyacarita :-

“Khalatvam alpīyasi jalpīte ‘pi tad astu bandibhramabhūmitai’va” (VIII-32 cd)

Darbhangā
31.08.95

TRILOKANĀTHA JHĀ

CONTENTS

Preface	i
1. Poetry	1
2. Prose	81
3. Campū	85
4. Drama	92
5. Poetics	115
6. Prosody	136

1. POETRY

The early history of poetic composition in Mithilā is shrouded in mystery. The earliest reference to classical Sanskrit poetry available is to his father, Nīlāmbara by Govardhanācārya in his *Āryāsaptaśatī*¹ Unfortunately, there is no material available to us to assess his poetic talent.

GOVARDHANĀCĀRYA

Traditionally believed to be an inhabitant of village kariyauna in Samastipur district, Govardhana was the son of Nīlāmbara. Balabhadra was his younger brother and Udayana his devoted disciple. He gratefully acknowledges the help rendered by them in the composition of his only available work, Āryā-saptaśatī.² This Udayana is different from and junior to the celebrated authority on Indian Logic, who dates his *Lakṣaṇāvalī*³ as Śāke 906, corresponding to 984 A.D.

Govardhana, as is evident from a use in the Āryāsaptaśatī, received patronage of a Sena-king, who was a connoisseur of all arts.⁴ Ananta Bhaṭṭa,

-
1. cf. kavim aham uśanasam iva taṁ tātāṁ nīlāmbaram vande //
- introductory verse on 38 (ed).
 2. cf. Verse No 701. Some scholars have interpreted the expression śiṣyasahodara to mean two pupils, who were full brothers.
 3. cf. tarkāmbarāṅka.
 4. cf. sakalalakāḥ kalpayitum prabhuḥ prabandhasya Kumudabandhoś ca / senakulatilakabhūpatir eko rākāpradośaś ca // - introductory verse No 39.

the author of the Vyaṅgyārthadīpana, a commentary thereon, is inclined to identify the king with Pravarasena of Kashmir, the author of the Setubandha. This view is also shared by MM. Sacala alias Bhavānīnātha, also a commentator on the Āryāsaptasatī. But on the basis of an inscription,¹ Govardhana is believed to have adorned the court of king Lakṣmaṇasena, the great patron of learning in Bengal. This makes him a contemporary of Śaraṇa, Jayadeva, Umāpati and kavirāja. In his Gītagovinda Jayadeva refers to Govardhanācārya and eulogizes his unique poetry brimming with erotic sentiment.² This places Govardhana in the end of the eleventh and beginning of the twelfth century A.D.

Govardhana's erotic verses have found favour at the hands of compilers of anthologies. The Sūkti-muktāvalī, the Śāringadharapaddhati and the Padyāvalī quote verses composed by him.

The Āryāsaptasatī, as the very name suggests, is a collection of 700 verses composed in Āryā metre. The number of verses varies in different editions. The verses arranged in vrajyā-s, in alphabetical order, are all saturated with the erotic sentiment in all its different phases.

They are all muktaka-verses, each one complete in itself. The poet's source of inspiration is the Gāthāsaptasatī of Hāla. Although Govardhana lacks

1. cf. govardhanaś ca śaraṇo jayadeva umāpatiḥ / kavirājaśca ratnāni samitau lakṣmaṇasensya //

2. cf. Śṛṅgārottarasatprameyaraca nair acarya gorardhana Spardhaḥ ko'pi na viśrutaḥ śrutidharo dhoyi kaviḥ kṣmapatiḥ//
-I-4 (ed)

in the spontaneity and humour of Hāla's poetry, his diction and craftsmanship deserve unstinted commendation. Hindī-poet Bihārī, the author of Satasāi is deeply indebted to him for the depiction of touching moments of human life and picturesque description of the feminine form. Govardhana himself speaks of the beauty and elegance of his Āryā-verses.¹

ŚRĪDHARADĀSA

Śrīdharadāsa was the son of Vaṭudāsa, a minister under king Nānyadeva, the founder of the Kārṇāta-dynasty in Mithilā. He was a Raṅgavālī-kāyastha living in Mithilā, so says MM. Parameśvara Jha.² He compiled an anthology entitled Saduktikarṇāmṛta in which a verse is attributed to Nānyadeva.³

GAṆGEŚA UPĀDHYĀYA

Gaṅgeśa Upādhyāya, the author of the Tattvacintāmaṇi, appears to have been a poet of note. His son, Vardhamāna calls him sukavikairava-kānanendu.⁴ He himself is said to have spoken *virīnciprapaṅce madanyaḥ kavilḥ kaḥ*⁵ (Who is a poet except myself in the whole of the world ?) As for

1. cf. masṛṇapadarīṭigatayaḥ sajjanahṛdayābhisārikāḥ surasāḥ / madanādvayopaniṣado viśadā govardhanasyāryāḥ // - Introductory verse No 51.

2. Mithilātattvavimarśa - I-103.

3. Vide Verse No 819.

4. Prof. D.C. Bhattacharya : History of Navya-Nyāya in Mithilā - p.97.

5. ibid. p.96.

his date, professor Bhattacharya opines that he cannot be placed before 1300 A.D. by any means.¹

MM. VIDYĀPATIṬHAKKURA

Then comes Vidyāpati Ṭhakkura, the immortal based of the language of Mithilā. His mellifluous songs became a bone of contention. For a long time Bengalese were adamant in treating his Padāvalī as a piece of Bengali poetry and he was himself declared a man from Bengal. However, he was rescued and allowed to return to his homeland, Mithilā, of course with added glory.

Vidyāpati was the son of Gaṇapati, the grand-son of Jayadatta and the great-grand-son Mahāvārttikanaibandhika Dhīreśvara of the Gaḍha-Bisapi - family of Maithila Brāhmaṇās of Kāśyāpagotra. A court-poet of the royal oinwar dynasty, Vidyāpati enjoyed the patronage of a series of rulers of the said dynasty, to list, Devasimha, Kīrtisimha, Śivasimha, Padmasimha, Lakhimādevī, Viśvāsadevī, Narasimha, Dhīra-matidevī, Dhīra-simha, Bhairavasimha, Candra-simha and so on. He has immortalized his patrons through his songs and other literary works. It is generally believed that Vidyāpati was born in 1350 A.D. and he died in 1439 or 1440 at the ripe age of 89/90 but Late Prof. R.K. Chaudhary opines that Vidyāpati can be placed between 1360 and 1480 A.D.²

Apart from his increasing number of songs in maithilī, we have got a good number of his works in Sanskrit and Avahatta on a variety of topics

1. ibid., p.103.

2. vide The Mithilā in the age of Vidyāpati, p.19.

ranging from moral tales and fables to abstruse texts of law and dharmaśāstra, from forms of letter-writing to the study of Tāntrika-cults. Since the scope of our present study is limited, we would concern ourselves to the following works alone and that too in the following chapter on prose:-

(1) Bhūparikramā

(2) Puruṣaparīkṣā

In the present context we would like to point out simply that the verse found in the two works mentioned above contain poetic perit.

CANDRAKALĀDEVĪ

Candrakalādevī was the daughter-in-law of Vidyāpati. She was the wife of M.M. Harapati Ṭhakkura, the eldest of his three sons. In his Rāgataraṅgiṇī Locana quotes a lyric, in mixed Sanskrit and maithilī, composed by Candrakalā¹ Dr. Miśra refers to two versions of the verse.² She can safely be placed from the close of the fourteenth to the first half of the fifteenth century A.D.

JAGADDHARA

A Maithila Brāhmaṇa of the Suragaṇa-family belonging to Parāśaragotra, Jagaddhara is traditionally believed to be a Dharmādhikaraṇika (Office-in-charge of the department of religion) at the court of Dhīrasimha. He was the son of Ratnadhara and

1. iti vidyāpatiputravadhvāḥ - p.54; the lyric is cited on pp. 53-54, Raj Press, Darbhanga Edn.

2. Jayakānta Miśra : History of Maithilī Litature - vol. I. p.198.

Damayantī, the grand-son of Vidyādhara, the great-grand-son of Tāntrika Gadādhara, the great-great-grand-son of Mīmāṃsaka Rāmadhara, who was the son of Mīmāṃsaka Caṇḍeśvara. Jagaddhara was the daughter's son of Sone of Banakujantī-family. He is placed in the first half of the fifteenth century.

He was a commentator. His commentary on the Meghadūta is entitled *Rasadīpikā*¹ and on the Gītagovinda is styled Sāradīpikā.² His commentary on the Bhagavadgīta is called Pradīpa.³ He has also commented upon the Devīmāhātmya.⁴ One Śivastotra is also ascribed to him. Besides, these are his commentaries on works of prose, drama and poetics, which will be referred to at later stages.

One Jagaddhara is also said to have commented upon the Kumārasambhava.

MM. BHAVANĀTHA MIŚRA

A scion of the Sarisava-branch of the Sodarapura-family of Śrotriyaś, MM. Bhavanātha Miśra was the son of MM. Ravinātha and the daughter's son of MM. Vateśvara of the Māṇḍara-family. He was a great philosopher. Some of his verses are preserved in the anthology entitled Vidyākaraśahasraka, compiled by Vidyākara Miśra.⁵ Two verses of his dialogue with his son, MM.

1. Mītra: Notices, No 1967; Published by KSDS University, Darbhanga, 1982.

2. Des. Cat. of Mss in Mithilā - II - Nos 41, 62.

3. Mītra : Notices, No 2138.

4. ibid., No 2400.

5. Allahabad, 1942.

Śaṅkara, in the anyokti-style are fine specimens of poetic composition.

Always a non-suppliant, he was nick-named Ayācī. As he was the father of MM. Śaṅkara Miśra, he is placed in the first half of the fifteenth century A.D.

MM. ŚAṆKARA MIŚRA

MM. Śaṅkara Miśra¹ was the son of MM. Bhavanātha Miśra alias Ayācī. Bhavānī, daughter of Raghupati of the Khanāla-family was his mother. Till recently, it was accepted that MM. Śaṅkara was present in the second and third quarters of the fifteenth century² but, on the basis of a verse composed by him in the praise of Emperor Babur, the present author maintains that it appears reasonable to conclude that he lived upto the beginning of the second quarter of the sixteenth century A.D. For, Babur reigned from 1526 to 1530 A.D.³

MM. Śaṅkara was one of the greatest philosophers Mithilā has produced - "the foremost Nyāya-Vaiśeṣika scholar" but he was a poet and dramatist as well.

-
1. For a detailed account of Śaṅkara Miśra vide 'Mithilāka vibhūti MM. Śaṅkara Miśra, Maithili Akademi, Patna, 1983 by the present author.
 2. U. Miśra : History of the Indian Philosophy - vol.II - p.324.
 3. Vide the authors paper entitled "The date of MM. Śaṅkara, the philosopher poet of Mithilā" presented in the thirty fourth session of the A.I.O.C., Visakhapatnam, 1989 (PR-168).

MM. Śaṅkara has compiled an anthology of his own verses entitled Rasārṇava.¹ It contains the verses composed by him from time to time to refresh his mind tired by constant contemplation of abstruse principles of Logic and subtle nuances of thought embodied in dialectic treatises.² These verses bear testimony to the poetic genius of the philosopher poet. Its descriptive talent is at its peak in the verses describing the kings and their courts, the ladies and their limbs but the most striking are his anyoktis. The Camatkāra embodied therein attract the mind of even a casual reader. These anyoktis complete with, ray, at times excel, those of Bhānudatta preserved in his Rasapārijāta and of Kaviśekhara Badrīnātha Jhā, the author of the Anyoktisāhasrī.³ There is one Rasakallolasāroddhāra by MM. Śaṅkara preserved in the manuscripts library of the Mithilā Research Institute, Darbhanga,⁴ but, on examination, we found it to be only an abridged version of the Rasārṇava itself. Prof. D.C. Bhattacharya has referred to a poetic composition of Śaṅkara entitled Paṇḍitavijaya,⁵ but we have not been able to see it.

MM. Śaṅkara is held in high esteem in Mithilā. He regarded as Śaṅkara, Lord Śiva Himself. These

-
1. First published by Late Dr. Amaranātha Jha, Allahabad, 1920. Then published by the Gaṅgānātha Jhā Kandriya Sanskrit Vidyāpeeth, Allahabad, 1991, edited by Dr. Kiśoranātha Jhā.
 2. cf. tarkābhyāsapariśrānta-svāntaviśrāntihetave / ye ślokā vihitās teṣāṃ saṅgraho'yaṃ vidhīyate // - verse No 2 (Rasārṇava).
 3. Vide the author's paper entitled "The anyoktis of MM. Śaṅkara" presented in the thirty second session of the A.I.O.C., Ahmedabad, 1984-85 (CS-25).
 4. Ms No 796.
 5. Vide History of Navya-Nyāya in Mithilā, p.134.

are numerous anectodes current in Mithilā pertaining to the worthy son and his worthy father,¹ but they are not being mentioned here for fear of the book being bulky.

GAṆAPATI

Gaṇapati,² also called Gaṇeśvara³ and Gaṇanātha⁴ was the son of Mahādeva, the younger brother of MM. Śaṅkara Miśra. He was the father of the celebrated Maithila poet and rhetorician, Kavirāja Bhānudatta.

On an examination of anthological sources, Chaudhuri has clearly distinguished between Gaṇapati and his namesakes, who flourished definitely earlier than our poet. For, the verses of that Gaṇapati have been quoted in the thirteenth century compilations like Sūktimuktāvalī and Saduktikarṇāmṛta.⁵

As regards the age of our author it has been established, after a careful examination of genealogical records and other internal and external

-
1. Vide the author's paper styled "The glory that was Mithilādeśa - I - Ayācī and Śaṅkara", published in Manīṣā, the journal of the K.S.D. Sanskrit University, Darbhanga, in No 2, 1974.
 2. cf. kṛtāharavinayo gaṇapati-tanayo - Gītagaurīpatikāvya - X - 1 (8) and yathā gaṇapataḥ kvyam - Rasapārijāta - I-2(a).
 3. tāto yasya gaṇeśvaraḥ - Rasamañjarī - last verse (No 138) and gaṇeśvarakaver vaco - Rasapārijāta - X-126.
 4. gaṇanāthakṛtām pustim - kumārabhārgavīyacampū - I-30(a) and kavigaṇanāthasutasya kaveriti - Gītagaurīpatikāvya - VI-2(8).
 5. Vide J.B. Chaudhuri's paper entitled Sanskrit poet Gaṇapati II" - The Poona Orientalist - Vol. VIII Nos 38-39.

evidences, that his son, Bhānudatta, was born during the third quarter of the fifteenth century, say by the year 1480 A.D.¹ and he (Bhānudatta) "flourished in the first half of the sixteenth century".² Thus, taking into account the institution of late marriage in those days, the birth of the father can safely be assigned to a prior round about 1435 A.D. and this is in consonance with the date of Gaṇapati's uncle, MM. Śaṅkara.

Chaudhuri opines that since the Subhāṣitāvalī in the present form was compiled about the fifteenth century, poet gaṇpati cited in that anthology cannot be the same as our poet. Here it is worthy of remark that the identification may be possible in the event of the said anthology being considered to have been composition of the close of the fifteenth century.

Chaudhury has presented an analysis of the verses composed by our poet. He has taken into account the verses preserved in anthologies like the Udayaveṇī, the Padyāmṛtataraṅgiṇī, the Sūktisundara, the Sabhyālaṅkaraṇa and the Subhāṣitasārasamuccaya.³ He has classified them under six heads - verses pertaining to (a) gods, (b) king, (c) women and love, (d) season, (e) nature and (f) miscellaneous verses.

In addition to these, Bhānudatta has preserved the verses of his father Gaṇapati with meticulous case in his Rasamañjarī, Rasatarāṅgiṇī, Alaṅkāratilaka and Rasapārijāta with an unfailing sense of acknowledgement of authorship. In the Rasapārijāta

1. Vide the concluding portion of Ramānātha Jhā's paper entitled "Kavirāja Bhānudatta" - The Patna University Journal - vol. III - Nos 1-2.

2. Vide J.B. Chaudhuri's paper referred to above.

3. Vide ibid. pp.141-142.

alone Bhānudatta has preserved some 104 verses composed by his father.

On an unbiased appraisal of these verses the greatness of Gaṇapati as a poet is a felt fact not liable to dispute. His mellifluous verses have a singular charm that can be better relished than expressed. In the Rasapārijāta the son has rightly enlogized the poetic genius of the father.¹ Besides, he is perfectly justified in saying that the blending of his verses with those of his father Gaṇapati is delicious as milk with sugar added to it.² It is because of his poetic talent that Gaṇapati is mentioned in the genealogical records with the like ḍhakkākavi (a poet whose literary achievements are as evident as the beat of the drum) prefixed to his name. A critical and comparative study of the verses composed by Gaṇapati and Bhānudatta makes it clear that the father was gifted with a poetic insight of superior calibre. Rightly, the son calls him a *Kavikulāṅkāracūḍāmaṇi*³ (cresh-jewel among poets).

In addition to the verses adverted to above, Gaṇapati appears to have composed a work, Mahāmoda by name, as the compiler of the Subhāṣita-sudhāratnabhāṇḍāgāra informs us.⁴ Tradition

1. cf. gaṇeśvarakaver vacoviracanaikavācaspatēḥ prasannagirina- ndinīcaraṇapallavadhyāyinaḥ / tathā jayati bhārati bhagavatī yathā sā sudh mudhā bhavati subhruvām adharamādhurī mlāyati // - X - 126.
2. yathā gaṇapateḥ kāvyam kāvyam bhāukaves tathā / ubhayorḥ saṅgamaḥ ślāghyaḥ śarkarākṣīrayor iva // ibid - I-2.
3. Vide Rasamañjarī - the concluding verse.
4. cf. muhurgaṇapatiṁ vande mahāmodavidhāyinam' vide kaṇśekhara's introduction to the Rasapārijāta-p'ka', foot-note 3 and Dr. S.K. De - Proceedings of the A.I.O.C. - Allahabad Session Vol. I - p.42.

attributes the authorship of one more work, entitled Rasaratnadīpikā to Gaṇapati from which a verse is quoted in the Rasatarāṅgiṇī.¹

In fine, it may not be out of place to mention that the matchless erudition of Gaṇapati led the compiler of the Subhāṣita sudhā ratnabhāṇḍāgāra to call him an incarnation of Lord Gaṇeśa himself.²

JAYAKRṢṢṆA PARAMAHAṂSA VIṢṆUPURĪ

Rāmāpati or Ramāpati of the Taraunī-branch of the Karamahā-family opted for sainthood of the Vaiṣṇava order and became famous in Mithilā as Jayakṛṣṇa Paramahaṁsa Viṣṇupurī. He was the son of Ratidhara by his second wife, maura, daughter of Kuśa of the Udanapura-branch of the Jajivāla-family. The pañjī records only one son of Viṣṇupurī, Mahādeva by name. Ramānātha Jhā says "it appears, therefore, that Sanyāsī Viṣṇupurī was born in the second quarter of the fifteenth century."

Viṣṇupurī composed Bhaktiratnāvalī, a devotional work enlogizing Lord Viṣṇu. His disciple Paramānandapurī also wrote a devotional poem entitled Premacandrika.³

KAVIRAJA BHĀNUDATTA

Bhānudatta, son of Gaṇapati, was born in the illustrious Ṣarisava-branch of the Sodarapura-family

1. Vide I-8.

2. cf. gaṇeśvarakaviḥ sākṣād avatīrṇo gaṇeśavaraḥ /.

3. Vide his paper "Paramahaṁsa Viṣṇupurī : His identity and age" in the Patna University Journal, January, 1945.

of Śrotriyaś of Mithilā. On the basis of anthological works, Bhānudatta has been regarded as identical with Bhānukara or Bhānucandra,¹ but some scholars have expressed grave doubts regarding their identity.²

However, Bhānudatta was born in the third quarter of the fifteenth century. He flourished during the first half of the sixteenth. In his sojourn he enjoyed the patronage of several kings and princes. Prominent among them are as follows :-

(1) Nizam II of Devagiri (1510-1553)³

(2) Krishnadev Rai of Vijayanagar (1509-1550)⁴

-
1. cf. (a) J.B. Chaudhuri : Muslim patronage to Sanskrit learning Vol. I - pp.2-3, second edition, Calcutta, 1945
 (b) H.D. Sharma's paper entitled 'The Poet Bhānukara' published in the ABORI - vol. XVIII p iii - pp.243-258
 (c) U. Miśra's introduction to the Vidyākaraśahasraka.
 2. (a) S.K. De - History of Sanskrit Poetics - p.245, foot-note 1 and some problems of Sanskrit Poetics (p.147), Calcutta, 1959
 (b) G.V. Devsthali - New Indian Antiquity VII (1944) - pp. 111-117
 (c) P.K. Gode - Indian Culture - III - pp.751-756.
 3. According to S.K. De, the Nizam, patron of Bhānudatta is identical with Ahmad Nizam Shah, the founder of the dynasty, who founded the kingdom sometime between 1499 and 1507 (vide De : Some problems of Sanskrit Poetics - pp. 144-145)
 But according to R. Jha, the said Nizam is Budhan Nizam Shah (1510-1553), the second ruler of the dynasty (vide Jha's paper referred to above). We are inclined to endorse the views of the latter.
 4. Vide J.B. Chaudhuri : Muslim Patronage to Sanskrit learning vol. I-p.6 - foot-note.

(3) Virabhānu of Rewa (1523-1555)¹

(4) Sangram shah of Gadhmāṇḍala (1480-1530)²

(5) Shershah, the emperor (1540-1545)³

The academic attainments of Bhānūdatta led Late Paṇḍita Rāmāvatāra Śarmā to remark:- "As a rhetorician and poet Bhānukara Miśra of Mithilā was richer in ideas and more delicate in diction than the famous Paṇḍitarāja".⁴

Following in the foot steps of his father, Gaṇapati, Bhānūdatta acquired high proficiency in poetical compositions. His verses bear testimony to his fine poetic talent. They have a singular charm that enthralls the readers. His description of the objects of nature is characterized by depth of thought, softness of expression, limpidity of style and novelty of conception. In his description of heroines his poetic fancy is on the wings, at times reaching the pinnacle of poetic excellence. To all this adds grace his rhetorical perfection. His choicest embellishments, conched in a remarkably perspicuous and idiomatic phraseology, characteristic of the prasādaguṇa, are reared in an air of spontaneity. Besides, his verses on holy places are all fine pieces of poetry.

In his Gītagaurīpatikāvya Bhānūdatta emerges as a composer of mellifluous songs in the praise of Lord Śiva.

-
1. P.K. Gode : Identification of Virabhānu, the patron of Bhānukara - The Calcutta Oriental Journal - Vol. II - No 10 (July 1935) pp.254-258.
 2. Vide R. Jha's in introduction to the Sūktimuktavālī of Harihara (p.36).
 3. Vide J.B. Chaudhuri, op.cit.
 4. Vide J.B.O.R.S., Patna - vol. XV.

In Mithilā although the brāhmaṇas are generally worshippers of six deities - Sūrya, Gaṇapati, Agni, Durgā and Śiva - the pañcādevatā and Viṣṇu, the sixth, they are specially devoted either to the Mother Goddess or Śiva, only rarely to Viṣṇu. In the opening verse of the Rasamañjarī his description of the Ardhanārīśvara- form of the Lord is simply superb¹ and his description of Lord Viṣṇu in His different incarnations as well as of other gods and goddesses is no less charming.² But he has composed a complete work eulogizing Lord Śiva in His different forms - the Gītagavīpati by name, imitating the style of the inimitable Gītagovinda of Jayadeva.

Although it goes without saying that by his self-praise no writer is held in high esteem, certain observations made by Bhānudatta in his works hold water.³

In his Alaṅkāratilaka Bhānudatta invokes Sarasvatī, the goddess of learning, to seek her favour. With due humility characteristic of a writer of high order, he says :-

"O Mother Sarasvatī! though on the subject these do exist certain works of my predecessors, yet you will kindly bestow your admiration on my work. For, although these do exist gems (of

1. Vide the verse beginning with 'ātmīyaṁ caraṇam' et seq.

2. Vide Rasapārijāta - I, Rasataraṅgiṇī - I -1, Alaṅkāratilaka - I - 1 and Kumārabhārgavīya - I-1.

3. bhānor gītaṁ sudhāsphītam - Gītagaurīpatikāvya - I - 2 and Vāgdevīśrutipārijātakusuma-spardhākari mañjarī - Rasamañjarī - the last foot of the concluding verse.

MM. Śaṅkara Miśra has said in connection with his verses preserved in the Rasārṇava.¹

The local tradition attributes the composition of an auto-commentary on the Gīta-gaurīpatikāvya by Bhānudatta, but, unfortunately, the said commentary is not available.²

RUCIKARA ṬHAKKURA

Rucikara Ṭhakkura, a śrotriya, was the eldest of the five sons of Maho. Keśava Ṭhakkura, three by his first wife and two by his second. He was well-versed in poetic discipline. In the cause of his self-introduction in the opening verse of the Kāvya-pradīpa his step-brother, MM. Govinda, calls him a poet³ but since no work of his is available we are not in a position to assess his poetic talent.

HARṢAṬHAKKURA

Harṣa Ṭhakkura was the youngest of the three full-brothers of MM. Govinda. He died a premature death and we have no information regarding his works but that he was gifted with poetic talent is evident from the feeling reference made to him by MM. Govinda towards the end of the Kāvya-pradīpa.⁴ Besides, he has also cited a verse composed by Harṣa to illustrate contradiction between guṇa and

-
1. Vide Rasārṇava - verse No 2.
 2. Vide p.XVIII (Introduction to Kavirājabhānudattagrāṇthāvalī edited by the present author, published, Mithila Research Institute, Darbhanga, 1988).
 3. cf. śrīgovindo rucikarakaveḥ snehapātram Kanīyān /
 4. Vide verse beginning with jyeṣṭha sarvagūṇaiḥ et seq on p.403.

kriyā.¹ In his anthology entitled Vidyākaraśahasraka Vidyākara has presented one more verse composed by Harṣa²

PADMANĀBHA MIŚRA

Padmanābha Miśra, son of Dāmodara Miśra the author of Vāṇībhūṣaṇa belonged to the Dīrghaghoṣa- (Dighavaya-) family of Maithila Brāhmaṇas. He was the author of Supadma-Vyākaraṇa. He composed Gopālacarita. He wrote commentaries on the Śiśupāla-vadha and *Ānandalahari*³

Padmanābha is placed in the second half of the fourteenth and the first quarter of the fifteenth century A.D.

MM. RATNAPATI

Son of Kaviratna of the Amarāvati- branch of the Dariharā-family of the brāhmaṇas of the Kāśyapagotra, MM. Ratnapati was married to Ratnāvati,⁴ the sister of Bhavadeva, the maternal uncle and guru of their son, MM. Umāpati,⁵ the author of the Padārthīyadivya cakṣu.⁶ MM. Umāpati is to be distinguished from his name sakes.⁷

1. Vide p.355.

2. Vide verse No 467.

3. Vide S.N. Singh: History of Tirhut - p.155.

4. In the Padārthīyadivya cakṣu their son Umāpati says :- ratnāvati-ratnapatyoh pitroh pūrvatapobalāt / ātanomi padārthīyam divyam cakṣur umāpatiḥ //

5. mātulabhavadevādīn ātmagurūn ādarad vande/ibid.

6. Published, Mithila Research Institute, Darbhanga, 1961.

7. Umāpati of the Śaṇḍilyagotra of the Pagaulī family, Umāpati of the Vatsagotra of the Pālī-family and others.

MM. Ratnapati is credited with the authorship of two, epics, Harivijaya and Rāmacarita.¹ Since MM. Śivapati, the elder brother of MM. Ratnapati ordered for a copy of the Vivekodaya of MM. Ratnapati to be prepared in L.S. 429 it appears reasonable to hold that MM. Ratnapati flourished during the first half of the sixteenth century A.D.

The Harivijaya is a characteristic Sanskrit epic. Composed with great effort, this epic follows, as the poet himself says, in the foot-steps of the Śisupālavadha of Māgha in its subject matter and method of treatment.²

The information regarding the Rāmacarita is based on the single reference made, by the poet, to it in his hitherto unpublished epic, the Harivijaya.³

Unfortunately, we have not been able to discover it.

MAHO. RĀMĀNANDA ṬHAKKURA

Mahopādhyāya Rāmānanda Ṭhakkura a śrotriya, was the elder of the two sons of Tarkapañcānana MM. Devanātha Ṭhakkura, the celebrated author of the saptakaumudī-s Sāvitrī was the name of his mother.⁴ Since the first three quarters

1. We are grateful to Late Paṇḍita Dhīrānanda Miśra, formerly collection pandit in the Mithila Research Institute, Darbhanga, for supplying information regarding the two epics of MM. Ratnapati.

2. cf. katham na ślāghantām harivijayam akrūramanaso nihat kāvyam māghapratidinidhi mahāyāsavहितam / - Mithila Research Institute MS No 926.

3. cf. mamā'nyat sarvasvām vimṣata hi tam rāmacaritam /.

4. cf. mātāpitarau vande sāvitrīdevanāthā khyau / - Rasataraṅgiṇī - 2 (ab).

of the sixteenth century have been assigned to the literary activities of MM. Devanātha, it will not be unreasonable to place his son, Rāmānanda in the second half of the same.

On the perusal of the *Rasataraṅgiṇī*¹ it becomes evident that its author, Rāmānanda, wrote at least for other works of literary value, which are all, unfortunately, lost to us. They are gītagopīśvara,² Śṛṅgāraśataka,³ *Madana-mañjarī*⁴ and Kṛṣṇarahasya-candrikā.⁵

MM. ANIRUDDHA

MM. Aniruddha was born in the Sihaulī-branch of the Māṇḍara-family of śrotriya-s. He was married to Devasenā, the daughter of Rāghava Jhā of the Ṣhaṭa-branch of the Karamahā-family from his first wife. Devasenā was fairly senior to her step-brother, MM. Harihara, the eldest son of her step-mother, Lakṣmī. This places Aniruddha in the second half of the sixteenth century, some forty to fifty years earlier than Harihara. This is further corroborated by MM. Mohana's statement in the colophon of his Bhāvasiṁha-virudāvalī that his father, MM. Aniruddha, commanded the respect of Emperor Akbar.⁶

-
1. Published, Mithila Research Institute, Darbhanga, 1961.
 2. Four verses quoted - Nos 106, 126, 160 and 232.
 3. Six verses cited Nos 134, 135, 150, 151, 161 and 186.
 4. A single verse quoted No 247.
 5. The only verse cited in No 249.
 6. cf. iti māṇḍarasam mahāmahopādhyāya-dillīśvara śrīmadakabbarasāhasammanitāniruddatmajamahopādhyāya mahā kavimohanaviracitā ... virudāvalī samaptā ।

The only verse of MM. Aniruddha available to us is the one preserved in the Vidyākara-sahasraka in praise of king Mānasimha¹ and this precluded the possibility of a correct assessment of his poetic talent.²

DIGAMBARA ṬHAKKURA

Digambara Ṭhakkura³ was the son of MM. Viṣṇudeva Ṭhakkura of the distinguished Nagavāra-branch of the ghusanta-family of the Śrotriya-s of Mithilā. This family, like the Sodarapura and Khaṇḍabalā families, has to its credit an outstanding contribution to Sanskrit learning. In these families were born generations of scholars who possessed the coveted title of mahā-mahopādhyāya. Digambara, eighth in descent from MM. Prajñākara appears to have flourished in the second half of the sixteenth and the first quarter of the seventeenth century A.D.

Digambara composed a virudāvalī, the manuscript of which is preserved in the K.S.D. Sanskrit University, Darbhanga.⁴ The author has extolled his patron king Uddyotacandra of Kūrmācala (or Kumāun) to the skies. He has

-
1. Verse No 799.
 2. We are indebted to R. Jha's introduction to the Sūktimuktāvalī of Harihara and U. Miśra's introduction to the Vidyākara-sahasraka.
 3. Vide 'Some forgotten litterateurs of Mithilā' - a paper by the present author published in the JBRS - Vol.XLVIII - pts I-IV, 1962 (pp.54-60).
 4. MS No 11 in bundle No 292. The colophon of the ms reads:- iti śrīdigambarākhyamaithilaviracito virudāvalīnā-magranthaḥ samāptim āsāde'ti śivam I.

eulogized the crown-prince as well. The concluding verse of the *Virudāvalī*¹ informs us that the author had written a drama, entitled Uṣākarabandha, but, unfortunately, it is not available. A post-colophon entry in the manuscript,² defining the nature of the viruda or panegyric literature, says that Digambara had written a work on prosody, Vṛttarahasya but that too shares the same fate as the dramatic composition of our author.

MM. RĀMEŚVARA

MM. Rāmeśvara a śrotriya, was the son of Vidhupati of the Dhaoli-branch of the Sodarapura-family. He was the maternal grand-father of MM. Harihara, the author of the Sūktimuktāvalī, Prabhāvatīpariṇaya etc. He was well-versed in the different branches of philosophy but his fame rested on his poetic composition, so says MM. Harihara.³ Unfortunately, there is no work of his available to us to enable us to evaluate his poetic personality.

This Rāmeśvara is different from his namesake to whom the authorship of the Pretavivāhapaddhati is ascribed. The latter, a student of MM. Gokulanātha, is a comparatively modern writer.

-
1. cf. sānandaṁ kavivṛndavanditapadadvandvāravindaśriyo vacāṁdhāma digambarastanuḥ śrīviṣṇudevasya yaḥ / Chandovṛttarahasyasodaramukhāsvādātīmodākulā tasyo' śākara bandhanāṭakakṛtaḥ sai'śā kṛtir jīvatu //
 2. cf. vistaraśtanu sandheyo matkṛte vṛttarahasye/
 3. Vide Sūktimuktāvalī - II - 22.

MM. HARIHARA

An inhabitant of village Bittho,¹ MM. Harihara of the Behaṭa-branch of the karamahā-family of the śrotriya-s was the son of Sadupādhyāya Rāghava Jhā with his second wife Lakṣmī² and the elder brother of MM. Nilakaṇṭha,³ the father of MM. Rucipati. After an examination of available materials Late Paṇḍita Ramānātha Jha, the learned editor of the Sūktimuktāvalī has fixed the age and identity of our author with meticulous care. According to him, MM. Harihara flourished in the first half of the 17th century.⁴ This corrects the views of Keith,⁵ Singh,⁶ Miśra,⁷ Bakśā⁸ and Kaviśekhara⁹ and finally clinches the issue.

MM. Harihara was a great poet and an accomplished dramatist. All his three works, Sūktimuktāvalī, Prabhāvatīpariṇaya and Bhartṛharinirveda bear testimony to it. Besides, some eighteen verses of Harihara are preserved in the anthology styled Vidyākara-sahasraka. Harihara had an

-
1. Vide pp.16 and 19 of R. Jha's introduction to the Sūktimuktāvalī.
 2. Vide Sūktimuktāvalī - XII-76.
 3. ibid., 77.
 4. ibid., introduction p.18.
 5. End of the 15th century - vide p.248, The Sanskrit drama in its origin, development, theory and practice, 1954 edition.
 6. Eighteenth Century - vide History of Tirhut p.134.
 7. Eighteenth century - vide introduction to the Vidyākara-sahasraka.
 8. First half of the 18th century - vide introduction to the Bhartṛharinirvedanāṭaka.
 9. Eighteenth Century - vide Mithilā mihiramithilāṅka - p.57.

unflinching faith in the unimpeded fame that a poet attains through his poetic compositions.¹

The *Sūktimuktāvalī*² or Hariharasubhāṣita,³ as it is commonly called, is an anthology of muktaka-verses composed by Harihara himself. "It is not a mere collection of subhāṣita-verse composed at random" rather "this is an inherent unity underlying the whole work"⁴ comprising twelve chapters. The late lamented Dr. Amaranātha Jhā, in his foreword to the Sūktimuktāvalī, has summarized the contents of the chapters in a single sentence. We are tempted to quote it. It is as follows :-

"The first deals with gods and goddesses; the second is concerned with children and their upbringing; the third contains words of advice to the young; the fourth is devoted to stay abroad; the fifth had verses calculated to win the patron's favour; the sixth has for its theme the manner in which royalty should be treated; politics are the subject matter of the seventh chapter; the eighth contains a description of the six seasons; the ninth concerns itself with erotic; in the tenth is an account of the different types of heroes and heroines; the eleventh is a miscellany and the last chapter sees the grown-up man back home, intent on leading a life of contemplation, - "calm of mind, all passion spent."⁵

In addition to its poetic excellence, the Sūkti-muktāvalī has historical importance as well. It

-
1. vide Sūktimuktāvalī - II-22(ab).
 2. Edited by R. Jha, Patna, 1949.
 3. Kāvya-māla - 86, NSP, 1890.
 4. vide p. 25 of R. Jha's introduction.
 5. ibid., foreword, p. (ii).

depicts the social life of Mithilā during the sixteenth and seventeenth centuries. Besides, it refers to Rāmeśvara - a new name in the annals of Sanskrit poets.

MM. MOHANA

MM. Mohana was the son of MM. Aniruddha Devasenā was his mother. He is placed in the first half of the seventeenth century. This stands corroborated by the fact that he enjoyed the patronage of Rājā Bhāvasimha, the son of Rājā Mānasimha.

In the Colophon of his work, entitled Bhāvasimhavirudāvalī, MM. Mohana is remembered as a mahākan.¹ Besides this Virudāvalī, MM. Mohana has *Anyoktiśataka*² to his credit.

The Bhāvasimhavirudāvalī is complete in eight folios. Its palm-leaf manuscript, preserved in the K.S.D.S. University, is dated Monday, the 15th of the dark half of the month of Phalguna in the year 1670 of the Śaka era. A fine specimen of the viruda-literature, the work extolls the heroic qualities of the poet's patron.

The Anyoktiśataka is a collection of a century of verses composed as anyoktis.

The anthologies, Padyavenī and Subhāṣita-sārasamuccaya preserve twenty four verses of one Mohana or Mohana Ojhā. Of these twenty two are common in both the anthologies. Only two of the verses collected in the Subhāṣita-sārasamuccaya are not found in the Padyavenī. The verses are all erotic in native.

1. K.S.D. Sanskrit University, Darbhanga MS No 181.

2. Published in the Kāvya-mālā NSP.

KAVĪNDRA GAṄGĀNANDA

In the seventeenth century in Mithilā a literateur of eminence was born, Gaṅgananda by name. In his Kaṇabhūṣaṇa he calls himself a tairabhukta (resident of Tirhut)¹ and in the Śṛṅgāraṇamālā a mithilādeśavāsin (an inhabitant of Mithilādeśa).² Tradition says that he lived in village Sarisava, the village of his maternal grand father. In his Bhṛṅgadūta he calls it a grāmaratna (a jewel among villages). This village has been a seat of Sanskrit learning from the days of yore. It has produced a galaxy of Sanskrit scholars.

Gaṅgananda calls himself a pautrī-tanūja (son of the grand-daughter) of Bhānudatta.³ The pañjī informs us that kavirāja Bhānudatta of the Sodarapura-family gave in marriage his grand-daughter, Sokhaitā, daughter of his eldest son, Janārdana alias Jānu to one Būḍhaba Jhā of the Baliāsa-family and Gaṅgananda was the youngest of the eight sons and two daughters of the couple. The maternal side of the Gaṅgananda was more illustrious than his paternal side and that might be the reason for his introducing himself as a bhānupautrī-tanūja. A scholar of note on the side of his father is Paṇḍitarāya (Paṇḍitarāja) Raghunandana, disciple of MM. Maheśa Ṭhakkura. This

1. vide verse No 143, p.112 of kavīndragāṅgānandagranathāvalī edited by the present author; published by the Mithila Research Institute, Darbhanga, 1988.

2. ibid. verse No.2, page no 185.

3. ibid.

Raghunandana was the elder brother of Gaṅgānanda's father - Būḍhaba Jhā.

Gaṅgānanda was a talented poet. His poetic merit fetched for him the coveted title, kavīndra. Of his six known compositions only one is a poetic composition, one dramatic and four belong to poetics.

The Bhṛṅgadūta is the lone poetic composition. It is a Khaṇḍakāvya, comprising 171 verses, in which the poet has tried to imitate the inimitable Meghadūta of Kālidāsa. As in numerous imitations of the immortal classic, usually classified under the heading dūta-kāvya, in the present work also the metre used by the poet is Mandākrāntā. In it Lord Kṛṣṇa and Rādhā stand for Kālidāsa's Yakṣa and Yakṣī, Kmākhyā for Rāmagiri, Madhupurī (Mathurā) for Alakā and the black-bee (bhṛṅga) for the cloud. Here the Lord is described as employing the black-bee to carry his message to his beloved Rādhā as an emissary and we have a very beautiful and picturesque description of the black-bee's journey from kāmākhyā in Assam to Mathurā in Uttarapradeśa. Gaṅgānanda describes the route to be followed by the black-bee in all its details - all after the pattern of the Meghadūta. The cities of Vārāṇasī, Prayāga and Mathurā have been described in all their grandeur. The poet's description of the lustre of the ladies of Vārāṇasī is worthy of note.¹

In the present context it may be mentioned that Gaṅgānanda's selection of Lord Kṛṣṇa as the hero and Rādhā as the heroine of the theme is a clear indication of his Vaiṣṇava temperament.

1. vide vese No 96 (p.18).

The only available commentary on the Bhṛṅgadūta is called *Rameśvaraprasādini*¹ after the name of the late Mahārājādhirāja Rameśvarasimha of Darbhanga, the patron of the commentator, Cetanātha jhā of village Navaṭola.

Kavīndra Gaṅgānanda had enjoyed the patronage of king karṇasimha of Bikaner, by whose orders he composed one of his works on poetics, styled Karṇabhūṣaṇa.

MAHO. VAṂŚAMAṆI JHĀ

Mahopādhyāya Vaṁśamaṇi jhā, son of Maho. Rāmacandra jhā and grandson of Dāmodāra jhā was a Maithila Brāhmaṇa belonging to Bharadvājagotra of the Sudai-branch of the Beloṅcā-family. Jayamati Devī was the name of his mother. He lived in Nepal and enjoyed the patronage of king Jagajjyotirmalla of Bhaktapura. He wrote Narapatijayacaryā in Nepalese year 734, corresponding to 1614 A.D. after the accession of Jagajjyotirmalla to the throne. Besides, he also composed a fine epic in Sanskrit, entitled Śrīkṛṣṇacarita or Harikelimālākāvya. According to Dr Jayamanta Miśra, it is a fine example of unique poetic talent of the great poet.² The first half of the seventeenth century is attributed to his literary activities.

HARIDEVA MIŚRA

Harideva had the honorific title avilamba-sarasvatī prefixed to his name in the pañjī.

1. Published with the Bhṛṅgadūta - Raj press, Darbhanga, 1915.

2. vide Maithilī Abhilekhamālā, Patna, 1977, p.25.

Son of Viśveśvara Miśra and Kumudinī Devī, Harideva was the elder brother of Raghudeva, the author of the (Shah Jehan) Virudāvalī. In the pañjī both Harideva and Raghudeva have been referred to as Śrutidharas, persons gifted with genius of retaining intact whatever is heard but once.¹

Harideva is credited to have composed a Virudāvalī in the praise of Emperor Jehangir (1606-1627 A.D.).² The description of the beauty, valour, patience, munificence etc. of the emperor is the main aim of the poet. While eulogizing the qualities of the emperor, the poet, as usual, has taken recourse to hyperbole. The use of Anuprāsa (alliteration) adds grace to the work from the beginning to the end. So far as the figures of speech pertaining to meaning is concerned, the copious use of Upamā, Utprekṣā, Rūpaka and Vyatiṛeka enhances the poetic charm of the virudāvalī, which is, however, not of much historical interest. There is, no doubt, a very fine description of the city of Agra but it is of more poetical than historical value.

Harideva is assigned the period between 1535 and 1640 A.D.³

-
1. For further details vide Tantranātha jhā's paper "Śrutidharas" in the Journal of Bihar University - vol. I - pp.79-80, 1956; J.S. Jha's paper "History of Darbhanga Raj" - JBORS - Vol.XLVIII - Sec I - pp.28-29; U. Thakur's paper "Sanskrit Learning under the Khaṇḍabalas" ibid. sec. II. pp.101-102 and S.H. Askari's paper in proceedings of the Indian Historical Congress - 1944, p.351, foot-note 13.
 2. Edited by Dr. Jagannatha Pathak and published in the Journal of the G.J.K. Sanskrit Vidyapeeth, Allahabad, vol.XXXIV - No 1-2, 1978.
 3. ibid., introduction (p.3).

MM. RAGHUDEVA MIŚRA

M.M. Raghudeva Miśra has the honorific title Buddhisarasvatī prefixed to his name in the pañjī. Raghudeva's mother, Kumudinī Devī was the daughter of MM. Acyuta Ṭhakkura,¹ son of MM. Maheśa Ṭhakkura, the founder of the royal dynasty of the khaṇḍabalā-s in Mithilā. Raghudeva was the younger brother of Harideva. They all lived in village Jamathari, according to K.P. Jayaswal but Dr. Śaśinātha Jhā claims them his co-villagers - inhabitants of village Dīpa.²

Raghudeva was a bālakavi, a pañḍitarāja and a śrutidhara.³ An erudite scholar gifted with poetic talent and sharp memory Raghudeva is said to have insited the court of Shah Jehan, the Emperor at Delhi in 1638 A.D. and composed his *virudāvalī*⁴ there. He had gone there, along with his elder brother Harideva, for a shave in the estate of the Khaṇḍabalā-royal family. They were both amply rewarded for their scholarship but were told that according to the tradition of the family a daughter's sons had no right to property in the estate of their maternal grand-father, even though he died without leaving a male issue. It is also said that the emperor conferred on them the honorific title of Sarasvatī.

1. cf. the penultimate verse of the virudāvalī.

2. vide introduction to Jehangirvirudāvalī p.7.

3. cf. the colophon which reads:-

iti śrīmahāmahopādhyāyapaṇḍitarājaviśrutaśrutidharabālakavimaithilāśrīraghudevasarasvatīviracitā virudāvalī samapta /

4. Edited by Dr. J. Pathak and published in the Journal of the G.J.K. Sanskrit Vidyapeeth, Allahabad, vol.XXXIV - No 1-2, 1978.

One of the vases of Raghudeva is preserved in the anthology of verses compiled by Vidyākara.¹

Taking into consideration that he was removed from MM. Maheśa Ṭhakkura by three generations and that he enjoyed the patronage of Emperor Shah Jehan, it appears reasonable to place him between the record half of the sixteenth and the first half of the seventeenth century A.D.

The *Virudāvali*² is dedicated to Sadānanda, the younger brother of the poet.³ In the eulogy of the emperor the poet has composed high - sounding verses abounding in rhetorical figures like Yamuka and Anuprāsa. A commentary, styled Vibudharājiranjini by Cakradhara Jhā of village Sāgarapura is also published with the text.

MADHUSŪDANA UPĀDHYĀYA

Madhusūdana Upādhyāya, the son of Śubhadrā and Padmanābha of Ujatī-family of Maithila Brāhmaṇa-s of Vatsagotra, was an inhabitant of village Satalakhā. He composed Anyopadeśaśataka.⁴ The second half of the seventeenth century is assigned to him.

MM. GOKULANĀTHA UPĀDHYĀYA

MM. Gokulanāthā Upādhyāya is one of the brightest stars of the galaxy of Sanskrit scholars of

1. vide verse No 449.

2. Published, Kāśī, Saṁvat 1960.

3. cf. kr̥tve'mām virudāvalīm iha sadānande'nije nyastavān / last foot of the last verse.

4. Published - Kāvya-mālā - IX, NSP, Bombay.

Mithilā. Born in the famous khanāma-branch of the Phandaha-family, he was an inhabitant of village Maṅgaraunī, near the district headquarters of Madhubani district. He was the third of the four sons of his parents. MM. Pītāmbara was his father and Umā his mother. The pañjī informs us that MM. Pītāmbara had the honorific title Vidyānidhi prefixed to his name. MM. Gokulanātha was the grand-son of Sadupādhyāya Rāmacandra, the great-grand-son of Sadupādhyāya Harihara alias Nīkāra and the great-great-grand-son of MM. Rucipati. The brothers of MM. Gokulanātha were also scholars of repute. The eldest, MM. Trilocana possessed the title Avilambasarasvatī; the second, Dhanañjaya alias Daṇḍapāṇi was also a Mahāmahopādhyāya and so was the youngest, Jagaddhara alias Jagannātha. In a verse in his drama,¹ entitled Amṛtodaya MM. Gokulanātha refers to the high intellectual attainments of his brothers. Even the sons of MM. Gokulanātha, both of them, MM. Raghunātha and MM. Lakṣmīnāthā, were noted for their scholarship. And so was his grand-son MM. Bhavānīnāthā. Such was the academic glory of the family.

MM. Gokulanātha acquired proficiency in different śāstras from his father, Pītāmbara Vidyānidhi,² whom he calls a parāparabrahmamīmāṃsahamāṃsalavijñānavāsana,³ a *sakalasārasvatasāṃsārasaraṇivibhāgavit*⁴ and a vāṇīvilāsakavi.⁵

1. vide V-24, Vijaya press, Muzaffarpur, 1925.

2. ibid., 25(a).

3. ibid., p.213.

4. ibid.

5. vide Śūktimuktāvalī of Gokulanāthā.

Prof. D.C. Bhattacharya regards MM. Gokulanāthā as "the greatest academic figure of Mithilā during the last 400 years"¹ and laments that "unfortunately no attempt has yet made to give a complete picture of his literary achievements and properly assess the value of his works, which are likely to reach three figures in total number."² Definitely it is a desideratum.

A polyhistor and a prolific writer, MM. Gokulanāthā enriched nearly every branch of Sanskrit learning by his original works as well as commentaries. He was a Śarayantrī - one possessing a title indicative of an erudition of the highest calibre. This coveted title was conferred on a scholar only after qualifying in a public test in which any person present could ask any question on any branch of learning and the examinee had to satisfy every such examiner.³ That MM. Gokulanāthā was one of the greatest intellectual stalwards of Mithilā is also corroborated by a verse composed by his pupil, Rāmeśvara, the author of the Pretavicūha-paddhatī, at the time of the death of his guru.⁴

MM. Gokulanāthā was a protegi of Phate Sāha, a Hindu king of Garhwal with his capital at Śrīnagara. he dedicated his Ekāvalī, a treatise on

1. vide History of Navya-Nyāya in Mithilā, p.193.

2. ibid.

3. vide Ramānāthā Jhā's paper entitled "The declaration of a śarayantrī" published in the proceedings of the A.I.O.C. Benares Session, 1946 pp. 309-325.

4. cf. mātar gokulanāthanāmakagurorvāṅgdevi ! tubhyaṁ namaḥ prcchāmo bhavatīm mahītalām idaṁ tyaktvai'va yad gacchasi / bhūloke vasatiḥ kṛtā mama gurau svarge tathā gīṣpatau pātāle phaṇināyaka bhagavati ! prauḍhiḥ kva labdhā'dhikā //

prosody, to the king.¹ Besides, he also composed his Sūktimuktāvalī, an ākhyāyikā containing didactic tales, with a view to instructing crown-prince Narendrasimha and prince Gopālasimha. According to Maithila tradition, while in Mithilā, Gokulanātha enjoyed the patronage of king Rāghavasimha and not that of Mahārāja Mādhavasimha, as Professor Bhattacharya inadvertently remarks.² For, the latter occupied the throne of Mithilā during the period 1775-1807 and not from 1700 to 1739 AD, as the learned professor observes.³

According to another tradition current in Mithilā, Gokulanātha turned down the royal request and did not join the court of Rāghavasimha or any other king of his time except Phate Sāha of Garhwal, because of the fact that he was the lone king unattacked by muslim invaders and as such had maintained the Indian culture undiluted. Besides, the *Muditamadālasanātaka*⁴ was also composed by Gokulanātha at the instance of crown-prince Narendra. The period during which Gokulanātha flourished is pretty certain. For, in his *Māsamīmāṃsā*⁵ he tells us that the year of its composition is 1631 of Śaka era,⁶ which corresponds to 1709 of the christian era. And this synchronizes

1. cf. ekāvalī phatesāha ! tava kaṇṭhe Luṭhatva'sau // - the second half of the opening verse.

2. vide History of Navya-Nyāya in Mithilā p.195.

3. ibid.

4. Edited by the present author and published by the Mithila Research Institute, Darbhanga, 1973.

5. Published, Vyasa press, Bhagalpur; also K.S.D.S. Univ. Darbhanga, 1981.

6. samprati hi śakābdāḥ :katrimśatśoḍaśasatī, op.cit., p.18.

with the date of king Rāghavasimha, who reigned from 1703 to 1739 A.D. But Gokulanātha must have adored the court of Phate Sāha before this period. For, Phatesāha "died in the year 1699 A.D."¹ And since the authorship of seven of the works of Gokulanātha is traditionally attributed to the period of his sojourn, it does not appear unreasonable to hold, as Prof. Bhattaraya opines, that he was born "in the decade 1640-1650 A.D."² Similarly, taking into account the volume of his contribution to the advancement of the different branches of Sanskrit learning and his august presence during the reign of king Rāghava simha we can safely endorse the traditional view recorded by MM. Mukunda Jhā Bakṣī³ that Gokulanātha died at Vārāṇasī at the ripe age of ninety. Thus "the decade 1730-40 A.D."⁴ assigned by Professor Bhattacharya to his death appears to be a sound judgement. Dr. Miśra, however, records a very short span of life of our author,⁵ but that does not seem reasonable.

Scholars are unanimous in their opinion that Gokulanātha wrote over a hundred volumes, but, unfortunately, a majority of them awaits discovery. In his introduction to the kāvya-prākāśa-vivaraṇa,⁶ Kaviśekhara mentions the name of thirty works of Gokulanātha. Of these the only poetical work available to us is Śivastuti, also called Śivaśataka

1. vide History of Navya-Nyāya in Mithila, p.195.

2. ibid. p.193.

3. Introduction (p.1) to the Amṛtodaya.

4. vide History of Navya-Nyāya in Mithilā, p.195.

5. vide History of Maithilā literature Vol.I - p.304.

6. vide pp.16-17, published, Varanasi, 1961.

containing a century of verses calculated to offer obeisance to Lord Śiva.¹ Besides, we have his elegy on the demise of his daughter, Kādambarī,² Kādambarīkīrti-śloka by name.

MM. TRILOCANA UPĀDHYĀYA

There is a century of verses composed by Trilocana Upadhyāya, called *Kedāraśataka*³ in praise of Lord Kedāranātha. Our author may be identified with the elder brother of MM. Gokulanātha who mentions him as a poet.⁴

KAVIŚEKHARA

A scholar of Mithilā possessing the honorific title 'Kaviśekhara' is the author of the Mālāvijaya-kārya, a manuscript of which is preserved in the K.S.D. Sanskrit University Library, Darbhanga.⁵ The author was a junior contemporary of MM. Gokulanātha and it was at his instance that the work was composed.⁶ In the colophon MM.

-
1. Published in the Kāvyamālā, Bombay 1887.
 2. vide the present writers paper entitled "Elegies on daughter's demise by Sanskrit poets of Mithilā read in A.I.O.C. - 33rd session, Calcutta, 1986.
 3. It is reported to have been preserved in the house of Paṇḍita Lucāi Jhā of village Pilakhawara, district Madhubani.
 4. vide Amṛtodaya - V-24(b).
 5. Ms No 3 of the bundle No 299.
 6. cf. haricaraṇāhitamatinā gokulanāthena kāritaṁ kṛtinā // - the first half of the introductory verse.

Gokulanātha has been eulogized as an incarnation of satyayuga.¹

The Mālāvijakāvya is complete in four cantos. The first is called virīncisabhāvarṇana; the second satyakali prasthāna; the third kali-martyāvatāra and the last śrīmadgokulanāthamahāśayavijayavilāsa. The central theme of the work is the supremacy of the Tanrika-cult over the Vaiṣṇava-cult. The manuscript is copied by one Nīlakaṇṭha of the Samaula-branch of the Panicobha-family and dated Saturday, the seventh of the bright half of the month of Phalguna of the year 582 of the Lakṣmaṇa era,² corresponding to 1701 A.D.

NARAPATI JHĀ

Narapati jhā of the Baliāsa-family lived in village Taraunī. He was the great-great-grand-father of MM. Parameśvara Jhā, author of the Mithilā-tattva-vimarśa.³ Narapati is said to have composed Rāghavakīrtisataka, Gopīvallabhakāvya, Vīravirudāvalī, Haṁsadūta and Prabodha candrodaya.⁴

Since Narapati was patronized by Rāghavasīmha (1703-1739) he can safely be placed in the eighteenth century.

1. cf. iti śrīkaviśekharakṛte mālāvijaye mahākāvye satyayugāvatāraśrīmadgokulanāthamahāśayavijayavilāso nāma caturthaḥ sargaḥ sampūrṇa iti l.

2. cf. phālgunaśuklasaptamyaṁ śanau somapallī-śrīlapanicobhasamśrīnīlakaṇṭhena likhitam idaṁ pustakam la. sa. 582.

3. Published in two volumes, Darbhanga, 1949.

4. op.cit., vol. II - p.42.

The *Rāghavakīrtiśataka*¹ is an account of the achievements of the royal khaṇḍabalā-family from Cāna Ṭhakkura to Rāghavasimha.

The *Gopīvallabhakāvya*² is a poetic composition dealing with the life of Lord Kṛṣṇa. MM. Parameśvara Jhā records that Narapati composed Prabodhacanidrodaya and Harisadūta in Śaka era 1625 and 1634 respectively.³ He is also credited with the authorship of Vīra-virudāvalī in praise of Hambīrasāha but the work is lost.⁴

MM. VARṢADHARA UPĀDHYĀYA

MM. Varṣadhara alias Theghū was the son of Caturbhuja of the Rājanapurā-branch of the Dariharā-family. He lived in village Maṅgaraunī. He was the sister's son (bhāginēya) of MM. Gokulanātha of the illustrious Phandahū-family. He is said to have enjoyed the patronage of king Rāghavasimha (1703-1739). Since he is only one generation junior to Gokulanāthā, he would have been born in the last quotes of the seventeenth century.

One of the verses of Varṣadhara has been cited in the *Vidyākaraśaṣṭaka*⁵ compiled by Vidyākara. The same verse has been quoted by his son

-
1. vide Des. Cat. of Mss in Mithilā vol. II- No 122; Mss are presented in the K.S.D. Sanskrit University Library, Darbhanga as well as with the descendants of MM. Parameśvara Jhā's nephew, Hariscandra Jhā at village Taraun.
 2. vide Des. Cat. of Mss in Mithilā Vol.II - No 52; A ms of it is presented in the house of the descendents of Hariscandra jha referred to above.
 3. vide Mithilā-tattva-vimaśa vol.II - p.42.
 4. vide ibid. p.100.
 5. vide verse No 565.

MM. Citradhara in the *Śṛṅgārasārīṇī*¹ to illustrate ābhīyogikīratī with due acknowledgement.

MM. CITRADHARA UPĀDHYĀYA

MM. Citradhara was the eldest of the four sons of his father MM. Varṇśadhara. Singh² tells us that Citradhara is traditionally assigned to the nineteenth century but, after a careful examination of available data, the late lamented Dr. Sir Gaṅgānātha jhā has rightly fixed the age of MM. Sacala, the pupil and a junior contemporary of MM. Citradhara, and placed him in the eighteenth century.³ Since Citradhara was junior to Golukanāthā by two generations and Gokulanāthā was born in the decade 1640-50, the birth of Citradhara can safely be assigned to the first decade of the eighteenth century A.D., if not a bit earlier. The find of a manuscript of his Vīrataraṅgiṇī,⁴ dated 1674 Śāke, corresponding to 1752 A.D. may also be treated as a corroborative evidence.

Among his poetic compositions the *Rājastutipadya*⁵ and the *Vināyakastava*⁶ have been

-
1. vide verse No 43, Edited and published by the present writer, Darbhanga, 1965.
 2. vide History of Tirhut, p.24.
 3. vide his foreword to the Rasapradīpikā - commentary on the Āryāsaptasatī.
 4. Edited and published by the present writer, Darbhanga, 1965. The colophon of the ms No 3 of the bundle No 5 foreserved in the K.S.D. Sanskrit University, Darbhanga reads as follows:- śāke vedamahīdharālicaraṇakṣaṇībhīr ālakṣite / et req.
 5. vide p.13.
 6. vide pp. 13, 15 and 17.

cited in his Vīrataraṅgiṇī but the works await discovery. Besides, five of his verses are quoted in the Vidyākarasahasraka.¹ They include one each from the *Śṛṅgārāsāriṇī*² and the *Vīrataraṅgiṇī*³

BĀLAKAVI KṚṢṆADATTA

Bālakavi Kṛṣṇadatta was the son of Bhaveśa and Bhagavatī.⁴ He was born in the famous Sodarapura-family⁵ of śrotṛiyas of Mithilā. An inhabitant of village Ujāna,⁶ he acquired proficiency in different branches of learning in the very childhood by the grace of goddess Durgā.⁷ He started composing poems, when a boy and hence he is called Bālakavi.

He enjoyed the patronage of the Bhosla king of Nagpur - Jānujī Mahārāja (1755-1772 A.D.). He was very closely attached to Devājīpanta Coraghore, minister of the king. According to Prof. S.L. Katre Kṛṣṇadatta flourished between 1740 and 1780 A.D.⁸ but since MM. Harṣanātha Jhā, father-in-law of the late Dr. Sir Gaṅgānātha Jhā (1871-1941) calls

1. Verse Nos 520, 547, 760, 761 and 836.

2. Verse No 51 (same as verse No 520 of the Vidyākarasahasraka).

3. Verse No 3 (same as verse 761 of the Vidyākarasahasraka).

4. Vide the colophon of the commentary on the Gītagovinda: 'iti bhagavatībhavēśasambhava-kṛṣṇadatta - et seq.

5. cf. sodarapurakulajāta kavikṛṣṇam - Gītagopīpatikāvya - 11/26.

6. Udyānavāstavyasamastavidya-śrīkṛṣṇadattasya kavītvam etat / ibid: 12/28.

7. labdhā śaiśava eva yena sakalā vidyā prasādyā'mbikā / - ibid. 12/27.

8. vide his introduction to the Purañjanacarita, a drama by Kṛṣṇadatta.

Kṛṣṇadatta the maternal uncle of the maternal grand father of his mother¹ in his commentary on the Gītagopīpatikāvya, Kṛṣṇadatta appears to have been born in the first decade of the eighteenth century A.D.

In the *Gītagopīpatikāvya*² Kṛṣṇadatta follows in the foot-steps of Jayadeva, the author of the Gītagovinda. The lyrics are all melodious and full of erotic sentiment. At the end of every song the author has mentioned his patron Jānujī Mahārāja. What is expressed in the songs is further corroborated by the verses interpresed in between two songs. The theme is the depiction of the love of Rādhā and Kṛṣṇa.

The *Lakṣmiguṇamaṇimālā*³ enlogizes the quality of head and heart of Lakṣmī, the consort of his patron. It is a khaṇḍakāvya, consisting of 125 verses, depicting the different facets of her personality.

There is a devotional poem composed by Kṛṣṇadatta, Caṇḍikācaritacandrikā by name. It is based on the Devīmāhātmya-portion of the Mārkaṇḍeya purāṇa delineating the emergence of goddess Durgā and Her unique feats of valour in exterminating the demons. The diction of the work is drawn largely from the source-book and the setumāhātmya-portion of the Skandapurāṇa.

1. cf. svamātrmātāmamahamātulena.

2. Edited by late Dr. Sir Gaṅgānāthā Jhā with the Bhāvadīpikā commentary by MM. Harṣanāthā Jhā; published, Bombay, 1903.

3. Edited by Dr. Jagannatha Pāthaka and published by G.J. Kendriya Sanskrit Vidyapeeth, as an appendix to Kṛṣṇadatta's Jānarājacampū, Allahabad, 1978.

The Kṛṣṇalīlā of Kṛṣṇadatta is a khaṇḍa-kāvya bubbling with erote sentiment. It depicts the amorous dalliance Rādhā and Kṛṣṇa. It is based on the Rāsālīlā described in the tenth skandha of Śrīmadbhāgavata. The available manuscript contains first forty four complete works and breaks off in the forty-fifth. The opening verse is in Śikhariṇī and the rest are all in Śārdūla vikṛīḍita. The use of anuprāsa is charming.

In deftness of description, dexterity of diction, sweetness of similes and abundance of alliteration Kṛṣṇadatta's works deserve mention. He has drawn his expression from the works of Kālidāsa, Jayadeva and Śrīharṣa but his phraseology cannot be termed as a slavish imitation of his predecessors.

Kṛṣṇadatta is said to have commented upon the Gītagovinda. His commentary is called Gaṅgā or Śaśilekhā.¹ Besides, there is a commentary by Kṛṣṇadatta on Mahimnaḥstotra as well. A commentary by one Kṛṣṇadatta on Nalodaya is entitled Sāhityadīpikā. In addition to this there is a commentary on Caurapañcāśikā by some Kṛṣṇadatta. It is not clear if they are all identical.

KHAGEŚA

Khageśa śarmā had the honorific title kaviratna prefixed to his name. He lived in village Ṭabhakā in Samastipur district. He is said to be a protege of land lords of Narhan estate. According to Candā Jha's verses in Kāśīśivastuti Khageśa lived during the reign of Mahārāja Narendra Simha (1743-1760) and so he is placed in the second half of the eighteenth century. Khageśa is credited with the authorship of Kāśīśivastuti, Śikhariṇīśataka and Kāśyabhilāṣāṣṭaka.

1. vide Des. Cat. of Mss in Mithilā vol. II No 157 and 157A.

RĀMABHADRA UPĀPĀDHYĀYA

Rāmabhadra, son of Karuṇākara Upādhyāya had composed Praśastiratna.¹

MM. SACALA MIŚRA

MM. Sacala alias Bhavānīnātha Miśra was the son of Raghudeva and Rambhā of the Balirājapura-branch of the Hariama-family of the Śrotiya-s.² He was the pupil of MM. Citradhara,³ the author of the Śṛṅgārasūriṇī and the Vīrataraṅgiṇī.

MM. Sacala was an eminent jurist. He was the chief judge of Tirhut. He was famous for his sound judgement. One of judgments delivered in Sanskrit had been published by the late K.P. Jayaswal.⁴ It is dated "Tuesday, the 13th of the bright half of the month of Jyaiṣṭha of Śaka 1716", which corresponds to June 10, 1794 A.D.

Besides, Peshwa Madhav Rao Narayan granted the gift of two village, Mahagavānand Salaiyā, in the Jubbulpur district to MM. sacala. The gift is

-
1. Its manuscript, dated Śake 1701, corresponding to 1779 A.D. is reported to be in the possession of Pt Vāmadeva Miśra of Rewan-Pakari, Pakarī-Vasantapura, dist Sitamarhi.
 2. cf. hariama kulajātaḥ śrotiyeṣūttameṣu - verse No 5 (a) of the Rasapradīpikā also jātaḥ śrīraghudevaśarmakṛtino rambhākhyadevīsutaḥ / ibid. 4 (a b).
 3. cf. sarvajñād iva samprāpya śrīcitradharaśarmaṇaḥ / ibid. 3 (ab).
 4. vide his paper entitled "A judgment of a Hindu court in Sanskrit" JBORS - Vol. VI - pt II - pp.246-258, 1920.

dated śāke 1710, corresponding to the 1788 of the christian era.

Furthermore, the grant of village Canoural to the same scholar by Mahārāja Mādhavasimha is dated 1779 A.D. and that of village Jagatapura by Mahārāja Pratāpa simha is dated 1771 A.D. All this, rightly, led Dr. G. Jhā to hold that MM. Sacala flourished in the eighteenth century A.D.

The only contribution of Sacala Miśra to Sanskrit Kāvya is his *Rasapradīpikā*¹ - commentary on the Āryāsaptasatī. It goes a long way in unfolding the subtle nuances of meaning embodied in the verses.

Besides, three of his isolate verses are preseved in the Vidyākarasahasraka.²

MM. MOHANA MIŚRA

MM. Mohana was the younger brother of MM. Sacala. The only work of his available to us is the Rādhānayanadviśatī, a khaṇḍakāvya consisting of 217 verses in all. The poet has succeeded in presenting a very vivid and picturesque description of the eyes of enamoured Rādhā in different phases of love culminating in final cousummation of the Divine Couple. Besides, some stray verses and one Bhakti-Kalpadruma composed by Mohana are still preserved in private collection of his descendants.

In the K.S.D.S. University Library is preserved a manuscript of the *girijāvinodakāvya*³ composed by

-
1. Published, Darbhanga, 1931 with a foreword by the Late MM. Dr. Sir Gaṅgānāth Jhā.
 2. Verse Nos 593, 813 and 819.
 3. Ms No 5 in the bundle No 340.

one Mohana. It is incomplete and breaks off in the sixth canto. An imitation of the gītagovinda of Jayadeva, it depicts Lord Śiva and Pārvaṭī in different phases of love. Herein is described the amorous story of the Divine Couple, which the poet recommends for those desirous of remission of sins to listen to. For, it is instrumental in the attainment of pure salvation.¹ But, for want of evidence, we have not been able to fix the age and identity of the author of the giriṣāvinodakāvya.

VAIDYANĀTHA

One Vaidyanātha Maithila is said to have composed the Keśavacaritra and Tārācandrodaya at the instance of his patrons, Rājā Keśavadeva and his son Rājā Tārācandra of Multan. He is assigned to the eighteenth Century A.D. but we have not been able to fix his identity.

KALIDĀSA MIŚRA

A Kālidāsa Miśra, traditionally held to have hailed from Mithilā, composed Nalodaya, a poem in four chapters, called āśvāsa.² Prajñākara Miśra son of Maho. Vidyākara Miśra wrote a commentary entitled Subodhinī on it and so Kālidāsa Miśra must have flourished earlier than Prajñākara.³

1. cf. -

śṛṇu giriśagiriśartelḥ kathām-aghacayāpacayaṁ yadi vāñchari / sarasamohanamohanakalpītām-amalamuktividhāyakagītikām //
- I-2.

2. vide Des. Cat. of Mss in Mithilā - Vol.II - poetry Nos 63, A.B.

3. vide ibid., Nos 64, A.

RĀMACANDRA

We are told of one Rāmacandra, author of the Rādhāvinodakāvya traditionally called a Maithila poet. Jayaswal mentions three commentaries on it, first by Nārāyaṇa, son of Raṅganātha,¹ second by Vidyākara Miśra, son of Ānandakara² and third anonymous.³

MAHO. ĀNANDAKARA

Mahopādhyāya Ānandakara was the father of Maho. Vidyākara and the grand-father of Prajñākara. He lived in village Sarisava, dist. Madhubani, whose a tank, Ānandakarī still exists to commemorate him. Late MM. Dr. U. Miśra places him in the end of the 18th century.⁴ That he was a great scholar is evident from the epilogue of Prajñākara's commentary as the Nalīndayakāvya but his inclination towards poetic compositions is confirmed by the compilation of eight of his verses by his son, Vidyākara, in the Vidyākara-sahasraka.⁵

RŪPANĀTHA

Rūpanātha was born in the second quarter of the eighteenth century A.D. His second son, Lakṣmīnātha died in Vikrama Samvat 1930 (corresponding to 1874 A.D.) at the ripe age of 88,

1. vide ibid. No 123.

2. ibid. Nos 124, A-F.

3. ibid., No 125.

4. vide Introduction to the Vidyākarasahasraka.

5. Verse Nos 326, 376, 377, 446, 788, 792, 837 and 838.

so says Candradatta, the son of Lakṣmīnatha.¹ He further states that Rūpanātha left Mithilā and settled in Māhiṣmatī (Maṇḍal). He was a scholar of philosophy and grammar but he was an accomplished poet also. He composed the Rāmavijaya mahākāvya.² It is complete in nine cantos. Based on the Rāmāyaṇa, it deals with the heroic exploits of Rāma culminating in his final victory of Rāvaṇa.

MAHO. VIDYĀKARA MIŚRA

Maho. Vidyākara was the son of Maho. Ānanda-kara and the father of Prajñākara. In an introductory verse of his commentary on the Nalodaya Prajñākara refers to the erudition of his father in different branches of learning with high proficiency in logic.

Vidyākara is famous as an anthologist. His compilation, Vidyākarasahasraka, is a representative anthology of verses composed by poets, mostly hailing from Mithilā. It contains, *intra*lia, some twenty four verses composed by Vidyākara himself. Besides, there are certain commentaries also written by him. For example, commentaries on Amaruśataka, Rādhāvinoda, Rākṣasa-Kāvya, Ṛtubarṇana and Vidagdhamukha maṇḍana.

PRAJÑĀKARA

Prajñākara, son of Maho. Vidyākara is the author of the Subodhinī-commentary on the

1. vide Rāmavijaya mahākāvya - introduction p.1. (foot-note).

2. Published, Sarasvati Bhawan Text No 39, Benares, 1932.

Nalodaya.¹ Written in a perspicuous style, it explains the meaning of the verses in the traditional fashion. However, the introductory verses give us copious information regarding the academic attainments of the commentators father and grand father.

RĀMA JHA

The author of the Mithilā-tattva-vimarśa informs that one of his ancestors, Rāma Jhā, a grammarian, was born in Vikrama Saṁvat 1765, corresponding to 1709 A.D.² Singh tells us that a work, Meghadūta by name, is ascribed to him.³ He further tells us that Rāma Jhā was the Rājapaṇḍita of Mahārāja Pratāpasimha who granted to him several villages as jagir during the period 1170-1178 fasli years, corresponding to 1763-1771 A.D.⁴

ROHIṆĪDATTA GOSĀṆĪ

Rohiṇīdatta Jha came of the Nāhasa-branch of the Khanāla-family. He lived in village Taraunī, district Darbhanga. He became a Vaiṣṇava-saint and there he became famous as Rohiṇīdatta Gosāṇī. He said to have lived during the reign of Mahārāja Chatrasimha (1807-1839) of Mithilā. Some, however, call him a contemporary of Mahārāja Mādhavasimha (1775-1807). The second half of the eighteenth and the first half of the nineteenth century may be assigned to him. The Kṛṣṇacarita, the Padyāvalī and the Prasastāvalī are his devotional poetical works.

1. Edited by Jagannātha Śukla, Calcutta, 1870.

2. vide Vol.II, p.100.

3. vide History of Tirhut p.160.

4. vide ibid. p.159.

DURGĀDATTA JHĀ

Durgādatta Jhā was an inhabitant of village Bharāma. He came of the Mahiṣī-branch of the Budhabāla-family. He was a great grammarian. Nowadays his descendants live in village Taraunī. Since Mahārāja Chatrasimha (1807-1839) had extended his patronage to Durgādatta, the beginning of the nineteenth century can safely be assigned to the period of his literary activities. One of his poetical compositions available is Vātāhvāna.¹ It is a collection of thirty five verses composed with a view to entreating the wind to blow. The verses begin with letters of Devanāgarī script from 'ka' to 'kṣa' taken seriatim. It has been a popular belief that thus invoked by the recitation of similar compositions the mind blows and relieves the people of excessive heat during summer season. Besides, we have his Praśastimālā also.

RATNAPĀṆI JHĀ

Ratnapāṇi Jhā village Navānī, Tamuriā was a protegee of Mahārāja Chatrasimha. He composed Padyapraśasti / Padyapraśastimālā and Praśastāvalī is praise of his patron.

MM. JĪVANĀTHA

MM. Jivanātha alias Āmikhī Jhā was an inhabitant of village Harinagara. Born in the last quarter of the eighteenth century, he flourished during the first half of the nineteenth. His

1. vide ibid., p.130; It is published in the Maithilapadyāvalī, Mithila Press, Madhubani, 1910.

*Kṛṣṇapañcāśikā*¹ is a khaṇḍakāvya being a collection of fifty verses composed with a view to offering obeisance to Lord Kṛṣṇa. They are erotic in character. They depict the love of the Divine couple culminating in their amorous dalliances. Some of the verses are very melodious and full of thought.² Jīvanātha is the author of an unpublished commentary on the Meghadūta also.

GAURĪNĀTHA JHĀ

Gaurīnāthā, son of Modanātha and grand-son of Bhaiyā of the Simaravāra-branch of the khanāla-family lived in village Sarisava. A śrotriya pupil of swāmi Viśuddhānanda Sarasvati, he wrote his only poetical work, entitled Yatīndracaritaprakāśikā, to perpetuate the memory of his guru. The second half of the nineteenth century A.D. is assigned to him. The Yatīndracaritaprakāśikā is a fine example of artificial poetry. The verses are all written in the pañktiyaṃaka (foot-chime) style. A single sentence is repeated four times to constitute the four feet of the verses but there is, of course, a change in the meaning.³ The author has also added his explanatory notes to the verses.

BĀLABODHA MIŚRA

A inhabitant of village Kokana, near corauta, Bālabodha Miśra was an erudite scholar of Mīmāṃsā. For long he was a professor of Mīmāṃsā

1. Published ibid.

2. vide verse No 43 beginning with rādhāromālireṣā et seq.

3. For example, bhāvena bhāvah paricīyate budhaiḥ, yogī janah paśyati sītayāśritam etc.

in the Queen's college, Varanasi. He wrote a work on the life and attainment of Mahantha Rāmalaṣaṇadāsa of corauta, Rāmalaṣaṇa carita by name.

LŪṬANA JHĀ

Born in the Dariharā-family, Lūṭana Jhā was a grammarian. He lived in village Koilakha, dist. Madhubani. He enjoyed the patronage of Tantradhārī sirṁha of the Khaṇḍabalā-family in the second half of the nineteenth century A.D. The Mithilā Research Institute, Darbhanga preserves a manuscript of his work *Rasavilāsa*¹ a collection of 55 verses composed in different metres. The poet has added explanatory notes. They bear testimony to the fact that the poet had a command over grammar.²

CHOṬĪKAVI

There is a small kāvya, *Gaṅgānanda kallolinī*³ by Choṭīkavi. It enlogizes the transcendental power and exquisite beauty of the divine river Gaṅga. Jāyaswal records another work also composed by Choṭī Jhā. It is khaṇḍabalā-kularājavarṇana.⁴

1. Ms No 1195. Its colophon reads as follows:-

iti maithila kvailakhagrāmavāsidadariharayavaṁśodbhava śrīlūṭanakṛto rasavilāsaḥ samāptaḥ /

2. He explains the word 'akṣarapaṅktiḥ' as akṣe dyūte rāti dadātya'kṣaro dyūtavavyavahāre dravyavyaya-karte 'tya' rthas tasya paṅktiḥ samūhas' ca /

3. Ms No 6974 preserved in the Mithilā Research Institute, Darbhanga.

4. vide Des. Cef. of mss in Mithilā - II - No 34.

CANDRADATTA JHĀ

Candradatta Jha flourished in village Hari-nagara in the time of Mahārāja Chatrasimha (1807-1839). He composed Bhaktamāla,¹ Rājāvalī,² Kāśikāgīta,³ Bhaktiratnāvalī,⁴ Kṛṣṇavirudāvalī,⁵ Kāśīśivastotra, Bhagavatīstotra, Karṇagītamālām-ahākāvya and a auto-commentary on his Virudāvalī.⁶

BHĀNUNĀTHA

Bhānunātha alias Bhānā Jhā was the son of MM. Dīnabandhu alias Nenana Jhā of the Sukheta-branch of the khanāla-family. He was a scholar of astrology and astronomy. He calls himself a daivajña. He enjoyed the patronage of Mahārāja Maheśvara simha (1850-1860 A.D.) He lived in village Pilakhavāra, district madhubani. He wrote Ślokaśataka. He flourished in the second half of the nineteenth century.

MM. DUHKHAMOCANA JHA

MM. Duḥkhamocana Jhā alias Babuā Jhā was the son of MM. Babujana and the grand-son of MM. Dīnabandhu alias Nenana Jhā of the Sukheta-branch of the Khanāla-family. Babujana was the younger brother of Bhānunātha. Therefore, the close of the nineteenth and the beginning of the present century

1. Published 1882.

2. Published 1882.

3. Published 1882.

4. Preserved the state chandradhari Museum, Darbhanga.

5. Preserved ibid.

6. Vide Des. Cat. of Mss. in Mithila - II - 149 and 151.

can safely be assigned to the literary compositions of Duḥkhamocana Jhā, who was junior to Bhānunātha by only one generation.

There is a century of verses composed by him, Kāvyaśataka by name. It is unpublished. The manuscript of the work is in the possession of the grand-son of the poet.

SATKAVI HEMĀṄGADA

Satkavi Hemāṅgada composed the Gaṅgaprabhāvakāvya. It is complete in six ullāsas. It eulogizes the majestic influence of the holy river Gaṅgā. The age and identity of the author is not fixed. The editor places him round about 1825 A.D. and says that he appears to be a poet from Mithila¹. Dr. Śaśinātha Jhā traces his genealogy. He is the son of Vidyudupādhyāya and grand-son of Yaśodhora, a commentary on Kāvyaaprakāśa and his time is circa 1500 A.D.

HRDAYANĀTHA MIŚRA

Hṛdayanātha Miśra, an inhabitant of village Baṭurī was a śrotriya brāhmaṇa of the Digauna-branch of the Sodarapura- family. According to the popular tradition, once he fell a prey to some fatal disease but he came round on composing his sūrya-stuti,² complete in twelve uses only. He is assigned to the nineteenth century A.D. There is one Hṛdayanātha, author of the nāndī-

1. Published, Viśva manīṣā, VIII and IX, 1984 and 1985.

2. Published by Virabhadra Miśra.

mukhanirūpaṇa,¹ who flourished in the same period in Mithilā. We do not know if they are identical.

CANDĀ JHĀ

Born in 1831 A.D. Candā Jhā of the Māṇḍara-family lived first in village Piṇḍārucha and later settled in village Thāḍhī. He enjoyed the patronage of Mahārāja Lakṣmīśvarasimha (1880-1898) and Mahārāja Rameśvarasimha (1898-1929). His Mithilā-bhāṣā-rāmāyaṇa is a monumental work in Maithilī. His only work in Sanskrit is entitled Lakṣmīśvaravilāsa, eulogizing his patron.

HARINĀRĀYAṆA JHĀ

Harinārāyaṇa Jhā was the father of Jaya ramaṇa Jhā, a nonagenarian śrotriya living in village Ujāna, district Darbhanga. He had composed the Lakṣmīśvarvilāsakāvya in praise of his patron, Mahārāja Lakṣmīśvarasimha (1880-1898). It is preserved in the K.S.D. Sanskrit University Library Darbhanga.

MM. HARṢANĀTHA JHĀ

Harṣanātha, a śrotriya brāhmaṇa of the Sakarāḍhī-family was the son of Brajanāthā and Śīlavatī. Brajanāthā lived in village Dharmapura but after his death his wife Śīlavatī, along with her son, Harṣanātha came to the place of her maternal uncle, Modanātha in village Śāradāpura. Harṣanāthā was born in the year 1847 A.D. He was a scholar of

1. Vide catalogus Catalogorum I - p.767(b).

Vyākaraṇa, Dharmaśāstra and Karmakāṇḍa. In the field of poetry we have his Śrīśarasvatī stuti and a commentary on the Gītagopīpatikāvya of Bālakavi Kṛṣṇadatta. His literary works were edited by his son, Paṇḍita Rddhinātha Jhā and published by his daughter's son, the Late Dr. Amaranātha Jhā in the form of Harṣanāthagranthāvalī.¹

Harṣanātha was a court poet of Mahārāja Lakṣmīśvarasimha (1880-1898) of the Khaṇḍabalā-family. He died in 1898 A.D.

CETANĀTHA JHĀ

Cetanātha Jhā, a Śrotriya brāhmaṇa of village Navaṭola enjoyed the patronage of Mahārājādhirāja Rameśvavasimha (1898-1929) of the Khaṇḍabalā-family. He composed a commentary on the Bhṛṅgadūṭa, entitled Rameśvaraprasādīnī.²

MM. RĀJANĀTHA MĪŚRA

MM. Rājanātha alias Rajje Mīśra came of the Narasāma-branch of the Baliāsa-family of Maithila brāhmaṇa-s of Kāśyapagotra. He was the son of Giridhārī. He lived in village Saurāṭha, district Madhubanī. MM. Rajje Mīśra was a great scholar of Nyāya. He enjoyed the patronage of Mahārājādhirāja Rameśvarasimha. He was the principal of the Rameśvaralatāvidyālaya, Darbhanga. He wrote the Bṛtiśavijaya, a laudatory poem felicitating king George V on his victory in World-War I. The second half of the nineteenth and

1. Indian Press, Prayag, 1935.

2. Published with the original text, Raj Press, Darbhanga, 1915.

first quarter of the twentieth century is assigned to him.

ŚAŚIPĀLA JHĀ

Śaśipāla Jhā of village Mānechowk, district Sitamarhi was a Jyautiṣī. He also was a protege of Mahārājādhirāja Rameśvarasimha. He composed the Devīcarita.

RAGHUNANDANA JHĀ

Raghunandana Jhā the author of the Padyanavati, a laudatory poem composed in the praise of his patron, Mahārāja-dhirāja Rameśvarasimha, was also a Jyautiṣī. He lived in village Koilakh, district Madhubani.

VĀṆĪŚA JHĀ

A protege of Kāśīnareśa Prabhunārāyaṇasimha, Vāṇīśa Jhā of village Akaura composed a khaṇḍakāvya on the line of the Meghaduta. It is called Cakoradūta.

JĪVANA JHĀ

Jivana Jhā, son of Ghoṃghī Jhā lived in village Haripura-Baḍhaitā near Samastipur. He also enjoyed the patronage of Kāśīnareśa Prabhunārāyaṇasimha. He composed the Prabhucarita depicting the life and attainments of his patron. He is also said to have composed the Narmadā-śataka.

MM. MUKUNDA JHĀ BAKŚĪ

An inhabitant of village Haripura, MM. Mukunda Jhā Bakśī was professor of Karmakāṇḍa at D.S.S. College, Muzaffarpur. He was the son of Bakṣī Nandalāla alias Muśālī Jhā of the famous Karamahā-family. Mukunda immortalized his family in his khaṇḍakāvya, entitled Śrīmatkarmahā-sukulakīrtikaumuḍī.¹ He also wrote Śrīmat khaṇḍabalā kulaprasaṣṭi,² divided into fifteen Chapters, called Viśrāma, dealing with the origin and development of the royal khaṇḍabalā-family from early times to the age of Mahārājādhirāja Rameśvarasinha, his patron.

MM. KṚṢṆASIMHAṬHAKKURA

MM. Kṛṣṇasinha Ṭhakkura, son of Jagatsinha Ṭhakkura of the illustrious khaṇḍabalā-family of Śrottriya-s was born in the year 1848 A.D. He lived in village Bhaura. He was a great grammarian gifted with a unique talent of justifying even words of foreign origin used in Sanskrit by a suitable application of Pāṇini's aphorisms. He was a great devotee and a poet also. The following stotras composed by him bear testimony to it.

- (1) Gaṅgāśrīlaharī
- (2) Amaranāthaśataka
- (3) Tryambakapañcāśikā
- (4) Vaiṣṇavīnavaka
- (5) Kāmākhyāstotra
- (6) Kālikātāvarṇana
- (7) Tārakeśvarastotra
- (8) Kāśīvarṇana

1. Published, Varanasi.

2. Published, ibid.

There is also an auto-commentary by the poet on his Amaranāthaśataka. In addition to these he has two more poetic works to his credit, namely, the *khaṇḍabalākulaḍīpikā*¹ and the Banailīrājyavarṇana, in which he has presented an account of the two flourishing royal families of Mithilā - Darbhanga and Banaili respectively. Besides, we have a good number of verses composed by him on the occasion of the felicitation of George the fifth and Queen Mary, Queen Victoria and Lord Curzon, Mahārāja Lakṣmīśvarasimha, Mahārāja of Kāśī and Rājā of Banailī. He died on October 9 in 1921 A.D.² Ayodhyānātha Miśra, a devoted disciple of MM. Kṛṣṇasimha Ṭhakkura, of village Canaura has written a commentary on the khaṇḍabalā-kulaḍīpikā, styled Prakāśikā.³

GOPĪNĀTHASIMHA ṬHAKKURA

Gopīnāthasimha ṭhakkura, son of Dāmodara-simhaṭhakkura of the khaṇḍabalā-family lived in village Bhaura. He was the author of the verses, ten in number, inscribed on a talent in the temple of his family-deity, Kaṅkāli, in his village. They describe the members of the family and the date of the completion of the temple as the renovation of the adjacent tank.

MM. PARAMEŚVARA JHĀ

MM. Parameśvara, son of Pūrṇanātha alias

-
1. Published, Shri Rameshwar Press, Darbhanga, Fasli 1322.
 2. All his available works have been published under the like Saṁskṛtakāvya-mālīkā by K.S.D.S. University, Darbhanga in 1987.
 3. Published with the original text in fasli 1322.

Bābūnātha Jhā of village Taraunī, was a scion of the Sakurī-branch of the Baliāsa-family. He was born on December 27, 1856. A court-poet of Mahārājādhirāja Rameśvara-siṃha, MM. Parameśvara Jhā composed the Yakṣasamāgamakāvya,¹ the Ṛtuvarṇana-Vyākhyā, the Vātāhvānakāvya, besides prose and dramatic compositions and works on rituals. In Maithilī he wrote the Mithilā-tattva-vimarśa, dealing with the history of Mithilā.

In thirtyfive verses brimming with erotic sentiment, the Yakṣasamāgamakāvya is intended to be a supplemet to the immortal khaṇḍakāvya of Kālidāsa - the Meghadūta. The poet has depicted the re-union of the Yakṣa and the Yakṣī in a very forceful style. The Ṛtuvarṇana is based on the Ṛtusamhāra of Kālidāsa. The Vātāhvāna is more or less on the line of earlier works of the same name. There is an elegy by him on the demise of his only daughter, Satyabhāmā.²

CAKRADHARA JHĀ

Cakradhara Jhā, son of Śatrughna Jhā of village Sāgarapura was a scion of the Narona-family. While serving as a teacher in the Durgā-tripāṭhipāṭhaśālā, he composed a commentary on the Virudāvali of Raghudeva Miśra. It is called Vibudarājirañjinī.³

1. Published, Darbhanga, śaka era 1817. This work is referred to and discussed under the title Yakṣamīlanakāvya in Saṃskṛtake Sandeśa-kāvya by Dr. R.K. Acārya, Ajmer, 1963, pp. 134-140.
2. vide the present writers paper entitled Elegies on daughter's demise by Sanskrit poets of Mithilā read A.I.O.C. 33rd session, Calcutta, 1986.
3. Published with the Virudāvalī, Prabhakar Press, Kāśī, 1960 Vikramasamvat.

MAHĀVAIYĀKARAṆA DĪNABANDHU

Dīnabandhu Jhā, son of Phekū Jhā of the Sihauli-branch Māṇḍara-family was an inhabitant of village Iśahapura. Born in 1878 A.D., he was a śrotriya and of the greatest grammarians of his time but, he wrote poetic works as well, namely, *Rameśvara-pratāpodaya*¹ and Rasikamanorañjinī.²

The Rameśvarapratāpodaya is the poetic history of the royal khaṇḍabalā-family in 130 verses. The first fourteen verses deal with the life and academic attainments of MM. Maheśa Ṭhakkura, the founder of the Rāja. Then follows the description of kings of the family upto Lakṣmīśvarasimha. The last thirtyfour verses are devoted to the then reigning king, Rameśvarasimha.

The Rasikamanorañjinī is a khaṇḍa-kāvya consisting of three chapters. The first, Mugdhā-prasaṅga contains 63 verses, the second Madhyā-prasaṅga comprises 87 verses and the last Pragalbhā-prasaṅga has 68 verses. The verses are all erotic in nature and they are devoted to a detailed description of the types of heroines.

Besides, he had composed Sūryastuti, Viṣṇustava, Kālīstuti, Śīvastuti, songs and verses felicitating patrons of learning.³

MM. SUREŚA MIŚRA

MM. Sureśa Miśra, son of Vasanta Miśra and

1. Published, Yajneshwar Press, Kāśī, 1902 A.D.

2. Published, Rameshwar Press, Darbhanga, 1912 and Nag Prakashak Delhi, 1995.

3. They are all published as a supplement to the Rasikamanoranjinī, Nag Prakashak, Delhi, 1995.

grand-son of Viṣṇu Miśra was an inhabitant of Viṣṇupura-Arera, district Madhubani. He was the younger brother of Naiyāyika Umeśa Miśra. Sureśa Miśra was a protege of Mahārājā-dhirāja Rameśvarasimha. Rameśvaranideśa, Maithīla-mahāsabhokti and Rameśvaralatābhinadana are among his prominent poetical compositions. Some of his verses are found in his anthology entitled *Maithilapadyāvalī*¹

LEKHANĀTHA JHĀ

Born in 1886, Lakhanātha Jhā, a śrotriya of the Simaravāra-branch of the khanāla-family of village Sarisava, enjoyed the patronage of Mahārājādhirāja Sir Kāmeśvarasimha (1929-1962) of the Khaṇḍabalā-family. He composed poems, Varṣāharṣakāvya and Mānasapūjākāvya.

The Varṣāharṣakāvya is a small collection of verses composed by the poet depicting the rainy season in all its phases. The poet is at his best while describing the dark clouds, the torrential rain, the lightning flashes and cool breeze specially with reference to the different forms of heroines.

Lekhanātha breathed his last in 1965

MM. BĀLAKRṢṂA MIŚRA

MM. Bālakṛṣṇa Miśra, a śrotriya of the Digauna-branch of the Sodarapura-family lived in village Avaṭola, near Sarisava, district Madhubani. He was the son of Gosāñi Miśra.² Jānakī was the

1. Published with the Rasakaustubha of Vaṇīdatta edited by Lekhanātha Jhā.

2. Vide Lakṣmīśvarīcarita - introductory verse No 13.

name of his mother.¹ He served as a Professor of Indian Philosophy at Rameśvaralatā vidyālaya, Darbhanga, Dharma Samaj Sanskrit College, Muzaffarpur and Benares Hindu University, Benaras. A philosophy poet, MM. Bālakṛṣṇa composed khaṇḍa-kāvya, Śrīrameśvarakīrtikalā, besides a commentary on the Rādhānayanadvīṣatī of MM. Mohana Miśra. Born in 1887 he died in 1943 A.D.

KAVIŚEKHARA BADARĪNĀTHA JHĀ

Mahāmahimopādhyāya Kaviśekhara Badarīnātha Jhā of the Simaravāra-branch of the Khanuāla-family of the śrotriya-s was born on January 12, 1893. Vidyānātha was his father and Māyādevī his mother. He lived in village Sarisava. He was the representative Sāhityika of the present century - the last great poet of Mithilā. His erudition fetched for him the honorific titles, Kaviśekhara and Mahāmahimopādhyāya. Among his contributions to Sanskrit poetry, the Pramodalaharī, the Rājasthānaprasthāna, the Rādhāāpariṇayamahākāvya, the Anyoktisāhasrī, the Kāśyapakulaprasasti, the śokaślokaśataka, the Saṃskṛtagītaratnāvalī and the kāvyaakallolinī deserve special mention.

The *Pramodalaharī*² is a stotra-kāvya. It contains fifty three verses.

The *Rājasthānaprasthāna*³ comprises 205 verses describing the itinerory of Mahārāja-dhirāja Rameśvarasimha with a view to raising funds for

1. ibid. No 19.

2. Published, Rameshwar Press, Darbhanga, 1911.

3. Published, Raj Press, Darbhanga, 1915.

the establishment of the Benares Hindu University. The description of the cities and native states of Rajasthan and of the warm welcome accorded to the Mahārājādhirāja is very picturesque. The route followed by him has been vividly described.

The *Rādhāpariṇayamahākāvya*¹ is a characteristic mahākāvya, complete in twenty cantos containing 2039 verses in all. The main theme of the work centres round the life and activities of Lord Kṛṣṇa culminating in the marriage and consummation of the Divine couple. The verses are fine pieces of poetry. The description of the six seasons is both lovely and lively. The last canto dealing with the amorous dalliance (rāsa-līlā) is the poet's master piece.

The *Anyoktisāhasrī*² comprises one thousand verses written in anyokti-style. The poetic charm of the verses is of a high order and the book reminds us of the anyokti-s of Śaṅkara ad Bhānudatta.

The *Kāśyapakulapraśasti*³ presents the genealogy and family history of the poet in Sanskrit verses written in a limpid style. He has dwelt upon the life and attainments of his fore-fathers and agnates.

The *Śokaślokaśataka*⁴ is an elegy in Sanskrit on the death of the father of the Nation. It consists of a century of verses brimming with pathos. The verses are characterized by a unique strikingness. The passing away of the Mahātmā has been

1. Published, Vijay Press, Muzaffarpur, 1931.

2. Published, Master Printing Press, Kāśī, 1938.

3. Published, Vaishali Press, Muzaffarpur, 1938.

4. Published, Darbhanga Press Co., Darbhanga, 1953.

successfully depicted in a hundred modes of expression.

The *Saṅskṛt-gītaraṭnāvalī*¹ is a collection of 101 devotional lyrics composed in different metres. Through these melodious lyrics the poet has succeeded in expressing his deepest devotion to Lord Kṛṣṇa and Rādhā.

The *Kāvya-kallolīnī*² is a compendium of isolated verses composed by Kaviśekhara on different occasions. It is divided into two chapters, called tarāṅga. The first tarāṅga comprises 601 devotional verses offering obeisance to different gods and goddesses. The second consists of four śatakas (century of verses) They are Praśnottaramaṇimālā, nītiśataka, Pāṭaliputrāpravṛtti and chandaśśataka, The last contains 102 verses composed in 102 metres.

We would discuss the contribution of Kaviśekhara to the other field of literature in the present book in their proper places.

Kaviśekhara passed away on November 4, 1973.

KṢEMADHĀRĪSĪMHA

Kṣemadhārī Sīmha came of the illustrious khaṇḍabalā-family of the śrotriya-s of Mithilā.

Born in March 1894, he graduated from the Patna University in the year 1918. His scholarship of the Vedānta philosophy fetched for him the title Vedāntavinoda. He was well-versed in the Tantra and he was a poet also. His *Surathacarita*³ bears testimony to it. There are nineteen Sanskrit works to

1. Published, Mithila Press, Darbhanga, 1954.

2. Published, Mithilā Research Institute, Darbhanga, 1978.

3. Published by Kshemadhari Prakashan, Madhubani, 1967.

his credit,¹ on a survey of which it is evident that his contribution to the stotra-literature deserves special mention.

The Surathacarita of kṣemadhārī is a mahākāvya, complete in eighteen cantos. The poet has described life of king suratha and the glorious deeds of goddess Durgā performed for the protection of the people against the atrocities perpetrated by the demons. The story is narrated in the Devīnīhātmya-portion of the Mārkaṇḍeya purāṇa. He is now no more.

BADARĪNĀTHA ṬHAKKURA

Badarīnātha Ṭhakkura, son of Yadunandana Ṭhakkura of the Khaṇḍabalā-family was born in fasli year 1306.² He lived in village Sarvasīma, dist. Madhubanī. A professor of Sāhitya in the Maheśvaralatāvidyapitha, Lohanā, Badarīnātha died a premature death on August 2, 1942. His only contribution is his Sanskrit commentary on the kumārasambhava of Kālidāsa.

BUDDHĪNĀTHA JHĀ

Buddhinātha Jhā, son of Pañcaratha Jhā of the Mahendrapura-branch of the Paṇḍuā-family was an inhabitant of village Rāma-bhadrapura. He was a professor of Jyautiṣa in D.S. Sanskrit College, Muzaffarpur. Tārā-laharī, Priyālāpakalāpa and Bhrātṛvilāpa are among his literary compositions.

1. vide introduction to Surāthacarita, p.5.

2. vide Candrapatikulaprasasti by Paṇḍita Jivānanda Ṭhakkara, Darbhanga, V.S. 1999.

DEVĪKĀNTA ṬHAKKURA

Devīkānta Ṭhakkura, an inhabitant of village Athari, was the son of Jīvanātha Ṭhakkura. He was a professor of Yoga at the D.S.S. College, Muzaffarpur. Devīstuti constitutes his main contribution to Sanskrit poetry.

VIṢṆUKĀNTA JHĀ

Padmavibhūṣaṇa Viṣṇukānta Jhā followed in the foot steps of his illustrious father, paṇḍita Ugranātha Jhā, one of the greatest astrologers of his time. Viṣṇukānta Jhā was born in the Vikrama Samvat 1968. He was an inhabitant of village Baikaṭhapura (Patna district). Vamśīdhara Jhā, one of his forefathers, had migrated to this village from his ancestral home at village Ṭamuria, district Madhubani. Though professionally an astrologer, Viṣṇukānta Jhā has two literary works to his credit, Ugravamśaprasasti and Rājendraprasasti. In the former the author presents an account of his family in 219 verses. The work is named after his father. The Rājendraprasasti depicts the life and attainments of the late Dr Rajendra Prasad, the first president of India.

Viṣṇukānta Jhā is now no more.

ĀNANDA JHĀ

Ānanda Jhā lived in village Simhāvāra, district Darbhanga. He was the son of Paṇḍita Bābūnandana Jhā. Bhagavatī was the name of his mother. He came of the Mehendrapura-branch of the Paṇḍuā-family. He was born on September 22, 1914 A.D. He expired on August 16, 1988. He was the professor and Head of the Oriental Section of the Department of Sanskrit, Lucknow University. After retirement, he served the K.S.D. University, Darbhanga as an eminent scholar. He was an outstanding scholar of Nyāya-philosophy but he was also gifted with poetic talent. The Candrāvāṭicarita and *Ānandamadhumandākinī*¹ are among his prominent poetic works.

The Candrāvāṭicarita portrays the life and munificence of Rānī Candrāvātī of Banailī Raj. The first volume of the Ānandamadhumandākinī consists of three parts, namely kāvyakalloliṇī, bhāvakalloliṇī and vībhāvakalloliṇī. It contains finest poems composed by the poet in different metres. The daṇḍaka-s written in the praise of dasamahāvīdyā-s are excellent.

ŚAŚINĀTHA JHĀ

Śaśināthā Jhā, belonging to Kāśyapagotra, came of the Rājanapurā-branch of the Dariharā-family. He lived in village Rāmṇī, district Madhubani. He was born in the last quarter in 1890, of the nineteenth century to be more exact. A great philosopher of his days, he composed Anyoktisūktāvalī,² containing 269 verses of anyokti to different objects of nature. At the fag end of his life, for some years, he served as a Traditional pandit at the Mithilā Research Institute, Darbhanga. He died in 1963 A.D.

KEDĀRANĀTHA JHĀ

Kedāranāthā Jhā, son of Harihara Jhā was an

1. Published, Lucknow.

2. Published Shri Jain-grantha Prakashan Sabha, Ahmedabad.

inhabitant of village Kaṭaiyā. He composed a small work, entitled Mithilāvarṇanakāvya in verse mixed with prose, dealing with the manners and customs of Mithilā.

KIŚORĪ JHĀ

Kiśorī Jhā, son of Lāla Jhā of village cikanauṭā, near Muzaffarpur was a professor at D.S.S. College, Muzaffarpur. He is credited with the authorship of Bhramarāṣṭaka, in addition to commentaries on Ghaṭakarparakāvya and Bhramarānyoktipañcaviṃśatikā.

ŚYĀMASUNDARA JHĀ

Śyāmasundara Jhā, son of Mathurānātha Jhā, a Śrotriya of the Pure-branch of the Narona-family lives in village Maharaila, district Madhubani. Born in the dawn of the present century, he is still very active. *Rājālakṣmīcarita*¹ in his only poetic composition. It is a panegyric account of Mahārānī Rājālakṣmī, the senior-most wife of the late Mahārājādhirāja Kāmeśvarasinha (1929-1962).

JĪVANĀTHA JHĀ

Jīvanāthā was the son of Mahāvaiyākaraṇa Dīnabandhu Jhā of village Iśahapura, district Madhubani. he was born in 1910 A.D. He breathed his last in 1977 A.D. His *Kāmeśvarapratāpodaya*² is a specimen of the Viruda-literature. it contains 125 verses. Completed in Śāke 1864,³ corresponding to

-
1. Published in the Mithila Research Institute Bulletin Darbhanga.
 2. Published, Raj Press, Darbhanga, Samvat 2001.
 3. vide concluding verse of the work.

1942 A.D., the present work is a laudatory discourse on the magnanimity of character of Mahārājādhirāja Kāmeśvarasiṃha. Written in fine Sanskrit, interspersed with choicest figures of speech, it depicts the qualities of head and heart of the Mahārājādhirāja. In it, however, the poet has made room for most of the famous bandha-s of artificial poetry.

MATINĀTHA MIŚRA

Matinātha Miśra of village Jamathari, district Madhubani, a śrotriya of the Balirājapura-branch of the Hariama-family, was born in the end of the first quarter of the present century, in 1924 A.D. He composed a mahākāvya entitled *Bhārgavaśikranta*¹ dealing with life and attainments of Paraśurāma.

HARIKĀNTA JHĀ BAKHŚĪ

Harikānta Jhā Bakhśī of the Karamahā-family was the son of Candradhara Jhā Bakhśī and Yogamāyā Devī. An inhabitant of Haripura-bakhśīṭola, he was born in the first quarter of the present century. He expired about three years back. His only poetic composition is Jambū-kaśmīra-suśamā-ratna.² It contains eighteen chapters, called Śrī. The poet has presented a picturesque description of Jammu and Kashmir in simple style.

GHŪTARA JHĀ

Paṇḍita Ghūtara Jhā, son of Paṇḍita Yadunandana Jhā, belonging to kāśyapagotra, came

1. Published Nāg Prakashan, Delhi, 1995.

2. Published, Bharatiya Vidya Prakashan, Varanasi, 1988.

of the Rājanapurā-branch of the Dariharā-family. An inhabitant of village Maḍhiā, district Madhubanī, he was born in the year 1892 A.D. His only poetic composition is Chātrakalpavallī, comprising four chapters, called pratāna. The first pratāna, entitled Ācārapratāna, contains thirtysix verses; the second, śikṣāpratāna, consists of sixty two verses; the third, Adhītipratāna, comprises sixty seven verses and the last contains only five verses. The poet died in 1945, leaving the work incomplete.

GAṄGEŚA MIŚRA

Gaṅgeśa Miśra, son of Paṇḍita Duḥkhaharaṇa Miśra of Haripura Bakhṣīṭola, district Madhubani, belonged to the Narasāma-branch of the Baliāsa-family. He had composed Sūryadvīśataka consisting of two hundred verses in Śārdūlavikrīḍika metre. It is unpublished. Born in the beginning of the present century in 1917 to be exact, Gaṅgeśa Miśra is now no more.

GAṄGĀNĀTHA JHĀ

One Gaṅgānātha Jhā alias Bāsū a srotriya of village Naruāra, district Madhubani, composed an elegy in Sanskrit at the demise of his wife.

GIRIJĀNANDA JHA

Girijānanda Jhā, son of Baukū Jhā of village Maharaila, district Madhubani, was born in the second quarter of the present century. He died in 1994. The Gītaśataka and Svātantryapūjana are his two poetic compositions.

RĀMACANDRA MIŚRA

Paṇḍita Rāmacandra Miśra of village Pakarī, district Sitamarhi was born on September 19, 1911. He died on October 5, 1994. He served D.S.S. College, Muzaffarpur as a Professor of Sahitya and also, on his retirement, K.S.D.S. University, Darbhanga, as an eminent scholar. He is the author of a mahākāvya entitled Vaidehīcarita,¹ dealing with the life of Sītā. He composed Smṛtīrekḥā,² presenting a poetic account of scholars of Mithilā. His Yājñasenīmahākāvya,³ of which only three cantos are published, presents an account of the life of Draupadī. He composed the Ṭharukathā,⁴ an autobiography of a mango-tree in fine 239 sanskrit verses. The tree tells its story making revelation of man's nature with regard to nature. It is full of irony and sarcasm. His *Abhinandamālā*⁵ is a collection of felicitatory verses composed by earlier poets.

SATYADEVA MIŚRA

Satyadeva Miśra of village Bhacchī, district Madhubanī, is the author of an epic, Gaṇeśasambhava,⁶ dealing with the birth of Lord Gaṇeśa.

Satyadeva was a great grammarian. He appears to have flourished between the second half of the

1. Published, K.S.D.S. University, Darbhanga, 1985.

2. Published, ibid, 1985.

3. Published, K.S.D.S.U. Journal Maniṣā - first year No 3 to third year No 3.

4. Published, Nag Prakashan, Delhi, 1992.

5. Published K.S.D.S.U. Darbhanga, 1981.

6. Reported to be in the possession of Paṇḍita Sūṭa Miśra, village Lālagan̄ja, dist Madhubanī.

nineteenth and the second quarter of the present century.

ŚYĀMĀNANDA JHĀ

Śyāmānanda Jhā, a śrotriya belonging to kāśyapagotra of village Lāлагаñja, district Madhubani, was born in 1906 A.D. He came of the Sihauli-branch of the Māṇḍara-family. He was the son of Hemapati Jhā alias Vikala Jhā and the grand-son of Vaidika Giridhārī Jhā. He passed away in 1949 A.D. Karṇikā, Madhavīthī and *Viḍambanā*¹ are his principal poetic compositions. The first two are composed in the anyokti-style. Both abound in the figure of speech called Aprastuta-praśamsā. The last is full of pathos. It expresses the height of physical and mental grief, which the poet was subjected to. His Sudhāvalī,² a pre-independence poetic work vividly describes the atrocities of the Britishers heaped on Indians. It is composed in the Pramāṇikā-metre. He is also credited with the authorship of Sevāvrata. A champion of popularizing Sanskrit, he wrote Saṅskṛta-Śikṣā and claimed through it a working knowledge of Sanskrit within three months. Śyāmānanda Jhā's Maithilī writing have been edited by his nephew, Rāmānanda Jhā 'Ramaṇa' and published by the Maithili Akademi, Patna.

GAṆEŚVARA JHĀ

Gaṇeśvara Jhā, son of Śiveśara Jhā, a śrotriya belonging to Vatsagotra of the Gaṅgaurā-branch of the Budhabāla-family, was born in the beginning of the present century. He lived in village Lāлагаñja,

1. Published, Maniṣā-year 3, No 4, pp.13-17.

2. Published, Viśvamanīṣā - year 4 No 1, pp.5-8.

district Madhuhani. On the demise of his first wife, Arundhatī Devī, he had composed an elegy in Sanskrit, full of pathos. He is now no more.

GAṄGĀDHARA MIŚRA

Gaṅgādhara Miśra, son of Acyuta Miśra of Lalbag, Darbhanga, was born on April 10, 1927. He had composed a very small poem consisting of twenty seven verses only, entitled Vaṅga-bhāratavijayakāvya,¹ dealing with the libration of Bangaladesh and India's contribution to it. He is also credited with the composition of *Sītāstotra*² and Gāndhī Kālajayī.³ He is alive and active.

BRAJANĀTHA JHĀ

Brajanātha Jhā, son of Jānakīnātha Jhā, came of the Pūre-branch of the Narona-family of Śrotriya-s of Mithilā. A inhabitant of village Maharaila, district Madhubani, he was born in 1929 A.D. The Himālayasandeśa and Gurunānakamahākāvya are his prominent poetical works. He died a premature death in 1970 A.D.

DR KĀŚĪNĀTHA MIŚRA

Emeritus Professor and Head of the Department of Sanskrit, Patna University, Patna, Dr. Kāśīnātha Miśra, a Śāstracūḍāmaṇi-scholar, was born in 1930. He is an inhabitant of village Cainapura, near Ugratārāsthāna, Seharsa district.

The *Vidyāpatiśataka*⁴ and the Kārṇāṭa-

1. Published, Bharati Press, Darbhanga, 1974.

2. Published, ibid., 1960.

3. In press.

4. Published, Janaki Prakashan, Patna-Delhi, 1992.

*rājatarāṅgiṇī*¹ are his two published poetical works. His *Harṣacaritamañjarī*² is in press. The Vidyā-patiśataka is a melodious poetic Sanskrit rendering of one hundred choicest Maithilī lyrics of Vidyāpati. The Kārṇāṭa-rājatarāṅgiṇī, composed in anuṣṭubh-metre contains eleven chapters, called taraṅga. The first three taraṅga-s present an account of Mithilā from the earliest times of the pre-kārṇāṭa-period. They serve as a prologue to the main theme. The fourth deals with the exploits of Nānyadeva, the founder of the kārṇāṭa-dynasty in Mithilā; the fifth delineates the life and attainments of his two sons, Malladeva and Gaṅgadeva; the sixth describes the praise worthy deeds of Narasiṁhadeva, son of Gaṅgadeva; the seventh has for its theme an account of Rāmasiṁhadeva, the eighth contains a vivid description of the visit of Tibetan Buddhist Tantric monk, Dharmasvāmī by name to Mithilā; the ninth consists of a survey of the reign of Śakrasīṁhadeva, son of Rāmasiṁhadeva; the tenth has for its theme an assessment of Harisiṁhadeva and his council of ministers and the muslim invasion resulting in migration of Harisiṁhadeva to Nepal and consolidating his regal position there, followed by the reign of his three generations after him forms the subject matter of the last taraṅga. Thus is retold the history of the kārṇāṭa-dynasty in Mithilā (1097 A.D. to 1324 A.D.) in beautiful verses characterized by poetic fancy couched in a suitable diction. The Harṣacaritamañjarī is purported to present a poetic rendering of Bāṇa's famous prose-work. Dr. Miśra is engaged in research and original compositions.

1. Published Patna 1994.

2. To be published shortly.

In addition to the poets referred to above there are several others whose time is not quite certain. They have been listed below in alphabetical order :-

1. Apūcha Jha - An astrologer of village Koilakha, district Madhubani, he composed Kṛṣṇalīlā-padyamaṇimālā.¹
2. Caturbhuja Miśra - (C.1650 A.D.) - compiler of the Rasakalpadruma, an anthology of verses containing verses of many poets from Mithilā.
3. Gumānī - Author of a century of verses entitled Upadeśaśataka.²
4. Harivaṃśakavi - Author of the Nītibhujāṅga-prayātāvalī.³
5. Jayadeva - Author of the Rāmagītagovinda.⁴
6. Kalyāṇa - An inhabitant of village Ujāna, dist. Darbhanga, he is credited with the authorship of a developmental poem entitled the Gītagaṅgādhara in the praise of Lord Śiva.
7. Kāśīnāthā - Author of the Yaduvamśakāvya.⁵
8. Lakhimā Thakkurāina - One of a few poetesses of Mithilā. One of her verses very popular in Mithilā has an indirect reference to the sons

1. Reported to be presented in the family of Paṇḍita Vedānanda Miśra, Rānīṭola.

2. Published, Kāvya-mālā - II, N.S.P., Bombay.

3. Preserved in the Mithila Research Institute, Darbhanga (MS No 2360).

4. Edited by Dr. Prabhat Shastri, Prayag, 1974 The poet says 'śrīmadvidehanṛpadeśaviśeṣavāsaḥ'.

5. Vide History of Maithili Literature - Vol. I p.223.

of Zodiac numbered in serial order from Meṣa.¹

9. Nenā Jhā - Credited with the authorship of the *Padyāvalī*²
10. Rājanārāyaṇa Dāsa - Author of the *Rājavallabha*³
11. Rājavallabha - Author of the Uddhavadūta composed on the line of the Meghadūta. There is also a work entitled *Rājavallabhamaṇḍana*⁴
12. Rāmacandra - Author of the *Vāgbhūṣaṇakāvya*⁵ pertaining to a difficult philosophical theme - Mokṣa (salvation)
13. Rāmakavi - Credited with the authorship of Pāṇḍavadigvijaya, a gazetter written under the Rājā of Pañcakoṭa.
14. Rucikara Upādhyāya, son of Bhāukara Upādhyāya of the Gaṅgaurā-branch of the Budhabāla-family composed Niroṣṭhyarāma - caritamahākāvya in seven cantos. Some assign him to the fifteenth century (C.1400 A.D.)

-
1. cf. her verse, which is as follows:-

ākṛtā daśamadhvajasya gatinā sammūrchitā nirjale, turyadvādaśamad- dvitīyamati manekādaśābhastanī / sāśaṣṭhī kaṭipañcanū ca navamībhrūssaptamī varjitā prāpnotya'sṭamavedanām tvam adhunā tūrṇamtrīyobhava //

2. Reported to have been preserved in the house of Paṇḍita Keśava Jhā, village Dharmapura, district Madhubani.
3. Preserved in the K.S.D.S. University, Darbhanga, Ms No 4 of Bundle No 45.
4. Preserved in the Mithila Research Institute, Darbhanga, Ms No 4656.
5. Vide Des. Cat. of Mss in Mithila vol. II No 132.

15. Silhana Miśra - Author of the *Śātiśataka*¹
16. Sonaphūla Upādhyāya - Son of Rāmaśekhara and Maṇimañjarī² and grand-son of Ananta, he composed the *Upadeśasamuccaya*³
17. Vijayagovindasinha - Author of the Rājāvalī,⁴ a poetical work dealing with the history of India in Sanskrit.

Besides all poets mentioned in the present chapter, the śākhāpañī (geneological records of different branches of families) puts on record the names of many more poets prefixing the epithets, Kavi, Sarasakavis, Kaviśekhara, Kavīndra, Kavitāvidyāpārāga, and Bhāṣākavi to their names but their works are not handed down to us.

Post-script

Rāmakiśora Jhā 'Vibhākara' of village Madhurā (Dīpa) has composed Mugdhaśataka and Pitṛśokasataka. Bholānātha Miśra of Mathurādīha dist. Muzaffarpur has written Bhāratiyasarvasva, a philosophical poem. It is published, Darbhanga 1983. Both the poets are alive.

Of the commentaries by scholars traditionally held to have hailed from Mithilā, except those mentioned earlier, a mention may be made of the following commentators, who have commented upon padyakāvya-s :- (In alphabetical order)

1. ibid., os 158, A-B.
2. cf. so'yaṁ chavir yasya mātā ca maṇimañjarī / śarvaśāstraparijñātā pitā śrīrāmaśekharaḥ // Verse No 3.
3. Vide Des. Cat. of Mss in Mithilā - vol II. Nos 18, 18A.
4. It is reported that its manuscript is in the possession of the sons of Paṇḍita Nenamañi Jhā of Bāmkī, Madhupur, district Madhubani.

1. Bhagīratha - on Raghuvamśa
- on Śisupālavadha
- on naiṣadhīyacaita
2. Bhānunātha - Vyaṅgyavilāsini on Āryasaptaśatī
3. Bhavadatta - Guḍhārthāpadavivṛti on Naiṣadhīyacarita
- Tattvakaumudī
on Śisupālavadha
4. Bhavadeva - on Naiṣadhīyacarita
5. Bhīṣma Miśra - on Kumārasambhava
6. Bṛhaspati Miśra - Raghuvivēkā
on Raghuvamśa
7. Caturbhuja - Tātparyavarṇana on Mahābhārata
8. Caturbhuja Miśra - on Amaruśataka
9. Citradhara - on Śisupālavadha
10. Cūḍāmaṇi - on Kumārasambhava
11. Dinakara - on Meghadūta
12. Divākara - Dyotika/Vidyotikā on Meghadūta on kumārasambhava
on Raghuvamśa
13. Duryodhana - Dīpikā
Upādhyaya on Vidagdhamukha- maṇḍana
14. Gaṇapati - Candrikā
on Caurapañcāśikā
15. Guṇanātha - Māghatattvasamuccaya
on Śisupālavadha

- | | |
|------------------------|---|
| 16. Janārdana | - Sūktipramodikā
on Naiṣadhīyacarita , |
| | - Dīpikā on Meghadūta |
| 17. Kṛṣṇānanda Jhā | - Bhāvārtha bodhinī on Devībhāgavata |
| 18. Mahādeva | - on Kirātārjunīya |
| 19. Mahīnātha | - on Śṛṅgāratilaka |
| 20. Manohara | - Bhāva vikāsana on Vāyubodha
of Kedāranātha |
| 21. Nandalāla | - Bālabodhinī on Amaruśataka |
| 22. Narahari | - Dīpikā on Naiṣadhīyacarita |
| 23. Narasimha | - Pañjikā
on Naiṣadhīyacarita |
| 24. Navanītarāma Miśra | - on Kumārasambhava |
| 25. Pītāmbara | - on Gathasaptaśatī |
| 26. Premadhara | - on Rākṣasakāvya |
| 27. Rāghava | - on Kirātārjunīya on Bhaṭṭikāvya |
| 28. Raghupati | - Vyākhyāśudhā
on Kumārasambhava |
| 29. Rāma Upādhyāya | - on Meghadūta |
| 30. Rameśvarasimha | - on Kumārasambhava |
| 31. Rūpanātha | - on Rāmakṛṣṇavilomakāvya |
| 32. Śaṅkara | - on Durgāsaptas'atī |
| 33. Śavikara Miśra | - Rasamanjari/Rasasañjīvaṇī on GitaGovinda |
| 34. Sarasvatīrtha | - on Meghadūta |

- | | |
|-------------------------|---|
| 35. Śaśidhara | - Raghuprakāśa
on Raghuvaṃśa |
| 36. Śrīkānta Miśra | - Padabhāvārthacandrikā
- on Gītagovinda |
| 37. Śrīkaṇṭha | - on Gītagovinda |
| 38. Śrīkṛṣṇa (pati) Jhā | - Anvayālāpikā
on Raghuvaṃśa ,
on Kumārasambhava |
| 39. Śrīnātha | - on Naiṣadhīyacarita
on Śiśupālavadha |
| 40. Śubhakaṇṭha | - Tippaṇa on Kirātārjunīya |
| 41. Sukhāvasu Jhā | - Ratnamañjarī on Nalodaya
on Śiśupālavadha |
| 42. Vidyāpati Miśra | - Vivarāṇa on Ghaṭakarprakāvya |

2. PROSE

The number of prose-works written in Mithilā is very small. The earliest prose-writer is MM. Vidyāpati Ṭhakkura.¹ The Bhūparikramā and the Puruṣaparīkṣā are his two prose-compositions.

The *Bhūparikramā*² is one of the earliest works of the author earlier than the famous Puruṣaparīkṣā. For, in the first chapter of the latter there is almost a verbatim reproduction of the eight tales of the former. From the corpus of the Bhūparikramā it is evident that it was designed to be divided into four parts consisting of sixtyfive tales containing descriptions of sixtyfive places of pilgrimage, but, unfortunately, only one part of the work is available. It is divided into six chapters. It comprises eight tales in all, which contain description of eight holy places only. The first four chapters contain description of one holy place each, whereas the last two of two each. The places of holy shrines are situated en route from Naimiṣāraṇya to Mithilā. All the time of the composition of the work, the patron of our author, Devasimha, son of Śivasimha of the Oinwar dynasty, at whose instance the work was composed, lived at Śaktipīṭha in the Naimiṣāraṇya. The Bhūparikramā reads like a purāṇa. The description of holy places of pilgrimage is designed as an integral part of the description of the expiatory journey of Balarāma undertaken as a sequel to the act of killing a Brāhmaṇa in the Naimiṣāraṇya. In

1. For details vide supra pp. 2-3.

2. Published, edited by Dr. Muṣvara Jhā.

the lord of Drupada, Balarāma meets sage Dhaumya. The latter accompanies the former on the journey. At night he starts telling a tale to Balarāma. And this is the beginning of the Bhūparikramā.

The *Puruṣaparīkṣā*¹ is a fable. It is a collection of didactic tales written at the instance of King Śivasimha. The primary object of the book is to impart lessons of morality to boys of immature understanding. Besides, the work is also purported to be relished by cultural ladies well-versed in amorous sports.² In it the personality of the author is revealed in its entirety. His views on life and its objects are depicted here in a lucid style interspersed with instances of wit and humour. That the best work of the author is Puruṣaparīkṣā is not liable to dispute. It has a fine and interesting beginning. The element of interest, for the reader, is maintained throughout. The tales are all full of wisdom, wit and humour.

A Rṣi, Subuddhi by name, starts narrating stories to king Pārāvara in the city of Candrā tapa relating to the test of man. The king is anxious to search for a suitable match for his most beautiful and accomplished daughter, Padmāvatī, who has attained the marriageable age. The Rṣi, through the medium of these stories, lays down the criteria for discerning the real (and hence suitable) man from the common mass.³ And hence the title of the work.

The Puruṣaparīkṣā is divided into four chapters, called Pariccheda. Each chapter consisting of a number of tales, seven being the minimum in the second, while fifteen the maximum in the fourth. In all the chapters there are storeis as well as counter-stories – the stories in contrast. But “in spite of its manifold merits, the Puruṣaparīkṣā has got poor poetry and faulty grammar.”

1. Published, edited by the late Paṇḍita Ramānātha Jhā.

2. Vide introductory verse No 3.

3. ibid., verse No 9.

The *Sūktimuktāvalī*¹ of MM. Gokulanātha Upādhyāya² is a unique prose-work consisting of seven chapters containing didactic tales of citraṅgadā, Parjanyaḥ, Vedavātī, Madayantī, Mandodarī and others purported to instruct indirectly crown-prince Narendra Siṃha and prince Gopālasīṃha, son of Phate Sāha, King of Garhwal with capital at Śrīnagara.³ The tales are all aimed at raising the moral standard of the princes and inculcating religious fervour in their mind. They abound in grandiose descriptions, couched in fine prose, full of figures of speech.

MM. Parameśvara Jhā⁴ is the author of two prose works falling in the category of ākhyāyikā. They are *Kusumakalikā ākhyāyikā*⁵ and Sīmantiṇī Ākhyāyikā.⁶

The *Lakṣmīśvarīcarita*⁷ of MM. Bālakṛṣṇa⁸ is also an ākhyāyikā, complete in six ucchvāsa-s. Written in fine Sanskrit prose the work follows in the

1. Published, Varanaseya Sanskrit University, Varanasi, 1963.

2. For details vide supra pp.22-25.

3. cf. śrīnagara vāsava iva jayati śrīphate patisāhaḥ /.

4. For details vide supra p.42.

5. Referred to in the Mithilā-tattva-vimarśa p.109.

6. ibid. pp.110-111.

7. Published, Rameshwar Press, Darbhanga 1921.

8. For details vide supra pp.44-45.

foot-steps of the famous Harṣacarita. The first four chapters deal with characteristic benedictory verses, verses calculated to praise the good and denounce the evil souls, verses giving the genealogy of the author, verses describing the seasons etc. along with the depiction of the early life of Mahārānī Lakṣmīśvarī, the youngest of the three wives of Mahārāja Lakṣmīśvara simha of Darbhanga. The description of Mithilā Raj from MM. Maheśa Ṭhakkura to Lakṣmīśvarasimha is the subject matter of the fifth, while the last is solely dedicated to the life and benficence of the Mahārānī.

The prose-work is published with an auto-commentary by the author entitled Sūkṣmārthavivecikā.

Matinātha Miśra,¹ a scholar of sanskrit at present engaged in literary activities has composed a gadyakāvya, Maharṣivīśvāmitra by name.²

The commentators, hailing from Mithilā, on prose-works include Jagaddhara,³ the author of the Tattvadīpnī on the Vāsavadattā of Subandhu,⁴ Śymasundara,⁵ the author of the Vaijayantī on the Śivarājaviṣaya of Ambikādatta Vyāsa and Vāsudeva, son of Devanātha on the Vāsavadattā.

1. For details vide supra p.51.

2. Published, ag Prakashak, Delhi, 1995.

3. For details vide supra p.4.

4. Quoted by Śivarāma o the Vāsavadattā.

5. For details vide supra p.50.

3. CAMPŪ

The *Kumārabhārgavijayacampū*¹ is the oldest of a few available campūkāvya-s written in Mithilā. Its author was Kavirāja Bhānudatta.² It is complete in twelve chapters, called ucchvāsa. It deals with the marriage of Śiva and Pārvatī and the birth and heroic exploits of Kumāra Kārtikeya. It comes to a close with the description of the death of Tarakāsura. The theme of the compū is based on the Śivapurāṇa and the Skandapurāṇa. The campū, inter alia, gives a detailed account of the forefather of the author. The genealogical information gathered from the verse of this campū is in consonance with the pañjī-records. They prove, beyond a shadow of doubt, that the present work is composed by Bhānudatta, the celebrated author of the Rasamañjarī, the Rasatarāṅgiṇī etc.

The Campū opens with an obeisance to the Boar-incarnation of Lord Viṣṇu, at the tip of whose tusk is dancing the earth, in which the stars act as the necklace; the cloud as the forehead mark; the divine river - the Gaṅgā the garland; the moon the sport-mirror and the sun the ear-ornament. It contains picturesque descriptions of the beautiful scenes of Nature, of Kumārakārtikeya's march for conquest, of the battle-field and the pitched battle. The depiction of the home-coming of the divine commander-in-chief brimming with joy over the victory, towards the close of the book, is also worthy of note.

1. Published in the Kavirājabhānudatta-granthāvalī edited by the present writer, Mithila Research Institute, Darbhanga, 1988.

2. For details vide supra pp.8-11.

The benedictory verse is followed by encomium for the good and opprobrium for the bad. As a part of the description of the march for conquest one finds beautiful description of holy places like Kāśī and Prayāga. The author's deftness of vivid description is discribed in his description of Pārvaṭī's birth, childhood and youth. The description of Pārvaṭī's svayaṁvara is deeply influenced by the description of Indumatī's svayaṁvara by Kālidāsa. Pārvaṭī sees Śiva in dream. She is enamoured of item but finding no way out to win his favour takes recourse to a very difficult form of penance. All this is in consonance with the Kumārasambhava of Kālidāsa but the ingenuity of Bhānūdatta lies in getting the marriage solemnized after the bride chooses the groom in a svayaṁvara.

Bhānūdatta is an accomplished another and so his use of choicest figures of speech both in prose and verse adds charm to the compū.

Next, in chronological order, comes the *Jānarājacampū*¹ by Bālakavikṛṣṇadatta² It contains more veses than prose-paragraphs. The number of the former is 305, whereas that of the latter is only 37. This campū is important both from literary and historical points of view. Its historical importance lies in a detailed description of the kings of the Bhosla-dynasty of Nagpur with special stress on the account of king Raghuji and his son Jāujī. The religious favour, munificence and bravery etc. of the Bhosla-kings have been put on records with facts and figures in this campū and this goes a long way in keeping the glory of these kings alive till present day. The ancestors of king Jānujī and his descendants, who were contemporary to Kṛṣṇadatta, have all been described in detail. This campū focusses a flood of light on the administration of the kings of the said dynasty. The mention of historical event contributes lot to the historical importance of the campū.

1. Published by the Gangānātha Jhā Kendriya Sanskrit Vidyapeeth, Allahabad, 1978.

2. For details vide supra pp.27-29.

While description the Bhosla-kings Kṛṣṇadatta, first of all, dwells upon the qualities of head and heat of Sudhājī. This is followed by the description of his son Bāpojī. There after Bimba, son of Bāpojī, is described. Then comes Raghujī. Raghujī's deftness in riding, archery and use of arms and ammunitions have been beautifully presented. Jānujī was his son from his first wife. He became famous as Jānarāja, the hero of the campū. Jānujī's younger brother was Sābājī. Their step brothers were Mudhājī and Bimbajī II. Raghujī got performed the marriage of his four sons and then set out for conquest. A detailed description of his conquests is of historical importance. Similarly, the heroic exploits of Jānarāja also have been discussed in extenso and they are of immense historical value.

The literary aspect of the campū is of no less importance. The apt use of the three rīti-s, the three guṇa-s and choicest śabdālankāra-s and arthālankāra-s proves the poetic maturity of the author. The Vīra-rasa is the predominating sentiment of the work and other rasa-s also have found their place, when circumstance have so demanded. A variety of metres has been used in the verse, the majority of which is in the Śārdūlavikrīḍita. Although the author has taken due care to avoid blemishes of poetry, certain defects like Duḥśravatva, Cyutasamskāra, Kliṣṭatva and Aślīlatā have cropped up. The campū abounds in wise sayings. They are memorable. They fit in the context. Some of them are based on religion, politics and ethics, while others are general in nature. The descriptive talent of the author is at its best in the description of battles.

DHARMADATTA alias BACCĀ JHĀ

Dharmadatta alias Baccā Jhā is the author of the Sulocanāmādhava campū.¹ He was born in second half of the nineteenth century on the ninth day of the bright half of the month of Caitra in the year 1856 of the Christian era.² The late Paṇḍita Śaśinātha Jhā also opines that Baccā Jhā was born in 1913 of the Vikrama era,³ which corresponds to 1856 A.D. but the late Paṇḍita Rāmacandra Miśra is of opinion that the great philosopher was born in 1917 Vikrama samvat,⁴ corresponding to 1860 A.D. Probably, on this very basis, Dr. Kāśinātha Miśra also fixes the year of birth of the author as 1860 A.D.⁵ He passed away in 1918 A.D.

A scion of the Sakurī-branch of the

-
1. Published by the Mithila Research Institute, Darbhanga, 1973.
 2. Vide p.2 of 'Sulocanāmādhavacampū kā samīkṣātmaka adhyayana' by Smt. Sharan Kaur.
 3. Vide p.49 of the editorial note on the Sulocanāmādhava campū.
 4. Vide p.62 of Vidvad Vibhūti.
 5. Vide p.1 of introduction to the Sulocanāmādhava campū.

Gaṅgaufī-family. Dharmadatta alias Baccā Jhā was the son of Durgādatta alias Bābūlāla Jhā and the grand-son of MM. Baburāiya Jhā. Lalitamaṇi was the name of his mother. He adored the chair of the principal, D.S.S. College, Muzaffarpur. He was an adept in all the branches of Indian philosophy. His literary genius finds its expression in his only voluminous campū-kāvya, Sulocanāmādhava campū by name. It has for its source the fifth and sixth adhyāya-s of the Kriyāyogasārakhaṇḍa of the Padmapurāṇa, which contains the story of Sulocanā and Mādhava. This campū comprises thirty six ucchvāsa-s. The author has not made any vital change in the pouranic story. He has, of course, made it highly poetical. Praceṣṭa, abductor of Sulocanā, has been portrayed by the author as very faithful to Mādhava with a view to presntig Sulocanā as a lady of very chaste and pure character.

The prose-style of the author is influenced by Bāṇabhaṭṭa. The use of choicest figures of speech adds charm to the prose. The use of anuprāsa, utprekṣā, upamā arthāntaranyāsa etc. contributes to the poetic charm of the campū. The depiction of love between Sulocanā and Mādhava is the theme of the work. Both the phases of śṛṅgāra-sambhoga and vipralambha have been portrayed with equal success. The latter has, however, as usual, an upper hand from the beginning to the thirty fourth ucchvāsa we have the description of the height of vipralambha. The sambhoga comes towards the end, i.e., in the penultimate ucchvāsa. So far as the rīti is concerned, all the three are used in accordannce with the situation, but, considered as a whole, the campū can be treated as a composition in the Pāncālīrīti. So far as the use of metres is concerned almost all types of metres have probably been used by the author while composing 2498 verses of the campū. The metres are in consonance with the nature of the object of description. In the third ucchvāsa one comes across the Daṇḍaka-metre as well.¹ The Campū amply proves that the author is a master-craftsman, when it comes to describe any object. His descriptive talent is worthy of note.

The Guṇeśvaracarita campū,² composed by Kaviśekhara Badarīnātha Jha³ comes next. This campū falls in the category of campu-s written on the life and attainments of a important personality. That personality, in the present case, is Mahārāja kumāra Guṇeśva rasimha. This campū is divided into four ucchvāsa-s. The first deals with the derivation of the word Mithilā, its boundary, its rites, its places of pilgrimage, its holy shrines, its saints and sages, its scholars of repute and its anecdotes based on the Veda-s, the Smṛti-s, the Purāṇa-s and the epics. It is a mine of information with historical and literary importance. The second is devoted to a detailed description of kings of the khaṇḍabalā-family from Mahārāja Mādhavasimha to Mahārājādhirāja Kāmeśvarasimha, the last king of the dynasty. The third and the fourth have for their subject matter the life and attainments of Guṇeśvarasimha.

The beautiful description of the autumn season in the third ucchvāsa reminds the readers of the one by Vālmīki. The life-sketch of the hero is complete and unabridged. Even the minutest details are mentioned. In due course winter and spring seasons

1. Vide pp.55-56.

2. Published Raj Press, Darbhanga, 1952.

3. For details vide supra pp.45-47.

are also described. The fourth ucchvāsa delineates the cruelty of Fate. Guṇavatī his beloved wife is dead. The depiction of pathos is very remarkable. This is followed by the marriage of Guṇeśvara śiṃha a second time with a view to performing rituals according to Śāstra-s. The detailed discription of places of pilgrimage forms a part of the visit of holy shrines by Guṇeśvara-śiṃha. An account of the books and digests composed by him is also incorporated in the work. The campū also describes his death at Vārāṇasī.

Judged from the literary point of view, the Guṇeśvaracarita campū is definitely a high-class piece of literature. All the rīti-s and guṇa-s have been taken recourse to according to the exigency of the situation. A variety of figures of speech and a number of metres have been used. The campū contains illustrations of three varieties of Vīra-rasa-Yuddhavīra, Dānavīra and Dharmavīra.

In addition to these Campū-Kāvya-s the following are reported to have been composed by persons noted against them :-

- (a) Vidvadvilāsa - Kiśorī Jhā¹
- (b) Daśarathābhiśāpa campū - Girijānanda Jhā²
- (c) Abhijñānamaitihila campū - Bunnīlāla Dāsa³
- (d) Rameśvara campū - Śyāmasundara Jhā⁴

1. For details vide supra p.50.

2. For details vide supra p.52.

3. The mauscript is preserved in the house of the Late Paṇḍita Ratneśvara Thakkura of village Kharauā, Tamuriā, district Madhubani.

4. For details vide supra p.50.

4. DRAMA

MURĀRIMIŚRA

Murāri Miśra was the son of Vardhamāna and Tantumatī. He belonged to the Maudgalya-gotra. He is called Bālavālmiki. Ratnākara in his Haravijayamahākāvya refers to Murāri as a playwright.¹ Jayadeva in his Prasannarāghavanāṭaka imitates Murāri's Anarghaghavanāṭaka.² Thus it is evident that Murāri flourished earlier than both Ratnā Kara and Jayadeva. Singh has rightly placed him "in the latter part of the eighth century A.D. or at the beginning of the ninth century A.D."³

Murari is traditionally believed to be a Maithila-scholars have advanced cogent arguments to prove that the dramatist hailed from Mithilā. They have analysed the idioms and phraseology of the drama. They have enumerated the names of commentators, most of whom belonged to Mithilā. They have taken into account the presence of the dramatists description of Mithilā in a journey from Laṅkā en route to Ayodhyā. They have also brought to the notice of scholars that these are brāhmaṇa-s of Maudgalya gotra in Mithilā as well. The Murāripada cintā by the Paṇḍita Umānātha Jhā, the present writer's father, is an illuminating research

-
1. Canto XXXVIII - verse 68, G.J.K.S. Vidyapeeth, Allahabad, 1983.
 2. Vide II-34, VII-83.
 3. History of Tirhut - p.151.

paper.¹ The post-graduate dissertation by Viśveśvara Jhā on Murāri is also informative.²

Besides the Anargharāghava, Murāri wrote the Bālacarita.³

The Anargharāghava deals with the story of Lord Rāma and Sītā. It is not upto the mark, if considered historically. It is more poetic than dramatic. "His diction is inscrutable and his ideas are far-fetched and in most cases unnatural. Anyhow he shows himself a master of scholarly reading and ready vocabulary. Viewed as classic poetry, "his work finds a middle place in the pantheon," says Singh.⁴ Chaudhary, however, refers to his "original similes, lyrical harmony", "purity of conception, delicacy of feeling and brilliancy of facts."⁵ Krishnamachariar opines "European critics have been unable to appreciate."⁶

ŚRĪKRṢṆA MIŚRA

Śrīkrṣṇa Miśra is the author of an allegorical drama, *Prabodhacandrodaya*⁷ by name. He calls himself a resident of Śāla-grāmatīrtha or Cakratīrtha. Dr. Umeśa Miśra is inclined to identify it with Hariharakṣetra or Hajipur.⁸ Since the

-
1. Read at the XIVth session of the A.I.O.C., Darbhanga.
 2. Submitted to the Mithila Research Institute Darbhanga.
 3. Vide Anargharāghava - VII - 146.
 4. Vide History of Tirhut p.151.
 5. Vide Sanskrit Drama in Mithilā - Prof. R.K. Chaudhary - J.B.R.S. - XLIII - pp.34-60.
 6. Vide History of classical Sanskrit Literature - pp.638 ff.
 7. Published in different editions.
 8. Vide his paper prabodhacandrodayanātaka-Kā upodghāta - J.B.R.S. - December 1953 p.436.

dramatist refers to Sindhu, Gāndhāra, Pārasīka, Magadha, Aṅga, Vaṅga, Kaliṅga, Pāñcāla, Mālavā, Ābhīra and Avatī as mlecchadeśa none of these can be entertained as his native place. His contempt for Gauḍa, specially Rāḍhāpurī, also precludes the possibility of its being his birth-place.¹ Probably on these very ground, Taylor calls him a Maithila.² Dr. Miśra supports his thesis by showing a borrowing of a half-śloka by Śrīkrṣṇa Miśra from Murāri Miśra, the author of the Anarghrāghava.

Since the play was staged, as Sūtradhāra informs, before Mahārāja Kīrtivarman (1049-1100), the second half of the eleventh century can safely be assigned to its composition.

MM. JAYADEVA MIŚRA alias PĪYŪṢVARṢA

MM. Jayadeva Miśra was the son of Mahādeva. Sumitrā was the name of his mother. In his works the son refers to his parents by name.³ He was a Śrotriya of Kauṇḍinya-gotra, says the late MM. Dr Sir Gaṅgānātha Jha.⁴, 1906. Peterson,⁵ Keith⁶ and Krishnamacharia⁷ opine that he hailed from Kuṇḍina or Kuṇḍinapura in Vidarbha (Berrar) but Jayadeva's contempt for south as expressed in his

1. Vide ibid.

2. J. Taylor in his introduction to his English translation of the Prabodhacandrodaya, Bombay, 1893.

3. Vide Prasannarghava - p.6 and Candrloka I - 16.

4. Vide his commentary on the line 'na nva 'yam pramāṇapra viṇo 'pi śrūyate' -published, Medical Hall Press, Kāśī 1906.

5. Vide introduction to Subhāṣitāvalī -p.37.

6. Vide The Sanskrit Drama in its origin, development, theory and practice - p.244.

7. Vide History of Classical Sanskrit Literature - p.645.

drama, *Prasannarāghava*¹ has led Paranjape² to hold that the dramatist hailed from north. Banerji Shastri and Jhā are of opinion that "he was an originaire of Mithilā" and "Peterson's remark may refers to his sojourn at Amarāvati or Vidarbha."³

Jayadeva is remembered as Pīyūṣa varṣa (one showing nectar) because of his mellifluous verse. His melodious diction has a signular charm. He wrote a seven-act drama entitled Prasanna-rāghava, drawing its theme from the Rāmāyaṇa. Though these are in it certain inaccuracies from the dramatic point of view, it is still considered superior to many later dramas written on the life of Rāma.⁴

Since the Prasannarāghava has been cited by Vallabhadeva in the Subhāṣitā-valī, compiled in 1247 A.D., Jayadeva must have flourished before that date. But he was born definitely after Ruyyaka, the author of the Alaṅkārasarvasva. For, in the Candrāloka he has reproduced Ruyyaka's definition of Vikalpālaṅkāra.⁵ Ruyyaka's pupil Maṅkhaka, author of the śrīkaṇṭhacarita was a protege of king Jayāpīḍa of Kashmir (1128-1149 A.D.). This places Pīyūṣavarṣa Jayadeva in the end of the twelfth and begining of the thirteenth century A.D. These it may be noted that Pīyūṣavarṣa was known to śiṃhabhūpāla, the author of the *Rasārṇava-sudhākara*⁶ and also to the compiler of the śārṅga dharapaddhati.

1. cf. 'kenā' pi dākṣiṇātyena naṭāpasadena' et seq.

2. Vide introduction to the Prasannarāghava - p.XIV.

3. Vide 'A note on Pakṣadhara Miśra - J.B.O.R.S. - Vol. XXIV.

4. For summary vide Keith: Sanskrit Drama :- pp.244-246.

5. Vide p.68, Bombay, 1939 edition.

6. Vide III - 171.

So far as Pakṣadhara Jayadeva is concerned, he came later. There is a manuscript of the Viṣṇupurāṇa proposed by Pakṣadhara himself in L.S. 345, corresponding to the year 1464 A.D. This is also in consonance with the traditional contemporaneity of Pakṣadhara and Vidyāpati.

AMAREŚVARA alias AMAREŚA

Amareśvara alias Amareśa was the son of sāreśvara alias Sāreśa and the great grand-son of Dharmēśvara alias Dharmadatta of the Brahmapura-branch of the Darihara-family. The Royal Asiatic Society of Bengal, Calcutta possesses a manuscript of his two act humorous play, entitled the Dhūrtaviḍambana. Dr. Śaśinātha Jha is engaged in editing it. He appears to have flourished in the quarter of the thirteenth and beginning of the fourteenth century A.D.

VIŚEKHARĀCĀRYA JYOTIRĪŚVARA

Kaviśekharaścārya Jyotirīśvara Ṭhakkura was the son of Rāmeśvara and the grand-son of Dhīreśvara Ṭhakkura.¹ He was the great grand-father of MM. Vidyāpati Ṭhakkura, the immortal lyricist-cum-scholar of Mithilā. Jyotirīśvara is said to have been a friend of king Harisimhadeva of the Kārṇāṭa-dynasty.² The period between 1280 and 1340 is assigned to Jyotirīśvara. A prahasana, entitled the Dhūrtasamāgama is composed by Jyotirīśvara. It is a one-act humorous play. It was written to be staged at the celebration of the king's victory in a battle

-
1. Some call him son of Dhaneśvara and grand-son of Rāmeśvara.
 2. For the age and identity of Jyotirīśvara vide Paṇḍita Rāmānātha Jhā's paper in JBRS - XXXVII pts 3-4.

with a Sultan. A lovely host of, Anangasenā is the bone of contention between Durācāra and his guru Viśvanagara. Both want to keep her as a personal possession. She expresses her desire to get the dispute settled through a arbitration. The arbitrator is Asajjāti, a clever Brāhmaṇa. He decides to keep the harlot with himself till the final settlement of the dispute. While she is with him the Vidūṣaka covets her. Mūlanāśaka, the barber had advanced some money to her. He asks her to repay it. She refers him to Asajjāti who pays out of the pupil's money. Asajjāti asks the barber to shave his hairs but the cunning barber instead chains his hands and feet and leaves the place. He cries for help and the Vidūṣaka comes to his rescue. Banerjee holds that another three-act prahasana, called Muṇḍatāprahasana,¹ "is also probably by the author of the Dhūrtasamāgama".²

With Jyotirīśvara had started an innovation in some of the Sanskrit dramas of Mithilā. In addition to the traditional use of Sanskrit and Prakrit, the local language Maithilī also found a place in dramas. In early stages the use of Maithilī was very limited but gradually, as the local audience became interested, the use of sanskrit itself began to dwindle into insignificance. At a later stage it began to be used only for stage-direction and finally the use of sanskrit was totally dropped and thus four Maithilī drama was born. Certain champions of Maithili literature hold the opinion that right from Dhūrtasamāgama the plays with Maithilī are all Maithilī-dramas but a section of sanskrit scholar is

1. Peterson's Report 11-122 - a work by śiva jyotirīśvara.

2. Vide p.91 of his contribution of Bihar to Sanskrit Literature, K.P.J. Institute, Patna, 1973.

of the view that a few of the dramas of earlier stage in which sanskrit is predominantly used should be classified under the head 'Sanskrit drama'.

Jyotirīśvara also composed two works on eortics - the Pañcasāyaka and the Raṅgaśekhara. In Maithilī he wrote the first prose-piece entitled Vaṇaratnākara.

In the Gorakṣavijayanāṭaka, Vidyāpati¹ presents a story based on the supra-natural power of the yogī-s of the Nāthasect. The play depicts how by his unique penance and haṭhayoga Gorakhanātha succeeds in getting his guru Matsyendranātha freed from the bond of Māyā. The drama abounds in songs and dances. it has the histrionic quality of a fine play.

The Maṇimañjarī of Vidyāpati is a purely sanskrit nāṭikā. It was composed by the dramatist during the reign of king Śivasimha. The Erotic (Śṛṅgāra) is the dominant poetic sentiment in the play. The exquisite beauty of Maṇimañjarī has been described by Vidyāpati in fine verses. The second half of the benedictory verse is also worthy of note.² Similarly, the description of the lotus-plant embraced by the rays of the morning sun is also marvellous.³ The plot of the drama is interesting.⁴

1. For details vide supra pp.2-3.

2. cf. itye 'vaṁ navasaṅgamollasitayor dolā vilāsālasā dṛkpātāḥ śivayor abhinnavapuṣor vighnaṁ vinigh nantu vaḥ /.

3. cf. āśliṣṭā karapallavena mukulavyājād vimudraṁ mukhaṁ bāle 'vambujabāndhavena nalinī vismāpayantī sthitā / apyā 'tīva samīpametya madhurārāvair dvirephāvalī manye mānavimocanāya racayatyā 'syāḥ purovācikaṁ //.

4. For summary there of vide introduction (pp. XXX-XXXI) to the Vidyāpatīsatakam by Dr. Kāśinātha Miśra, Janaki Prakashan, Patna - Delhi, 1992.

The Gaurīdigambaraprahasana of MM. Śaṅkara Miśra¹ is a humorous play dealing with the marriage of Śiva and Pāravatī. Śiva's failure in telling the names of his father, grand-father and great-grand-father at the time of the gotrādhyāya during kanyādāna evokes laughter.² Besides, there are other numerous instances of wit and humour in the play. While introducing the dramatist to the spectators, the naṭī informs that the dramatist had already composed two dramas, Manobhava-parābhava and Kṛṣṇavinoda.³ Unfortunately, these two dramas are not available. The description of the spring-season and the breeze from the Malaya-mountain is fine. The benedictory verse invoking smiling Digambara Śiva, with his head bent down at seeing his mother-in-law Menā discard her clothes being burnt by his fire-emitting third eye, while she was performing His nīrājana at her door-step, to protect the spectators, is amusing.⁴

1. For details vide supra p.5.

2. At last Brahmā, the officiating priest gets the kanyādāna compiled with the following :- "om adya gotrarahitasya pravarahīnasya pitṛpitāmahaprapitāmamahahīnasya ajata varṇavibhāgasya anekakandarāvato himavataḥ putrīm gaurīnāmnīm imāṁ kanyāṁ sālankārāṁ digambarāya gotrarahitāya nihpravārāya pitṛpitāmahaprapitāmahahī nāya virūpākṣaya kapāline patnītvena tubhyam ahaṁ sampradade /".

3. cf. "jeṇa kaiṇā kaṇhaviṇodaṇāḍaam maṇohavaparāhavaṇāḍaam a viraiam idam pi pahasaṇam teṇa viraiam /".

4. cf. "nīrājanāṁ vidadhatīm śaśimaulimaulau tallocanānalaśikhāparidahyamānam / vāso haṭhād vijahatīm avalokya manām smerānatānavidhuḥ sa digambaro'vyāt /".

BĀṆA KAVI

Bāṇakavi, the author of the drama *Pārvatīpariṇaya*¹ came of the Bhaṇḍārisama-family of Maithila brāhmaṇa-s of vatsa-gotra. Traditionally he is regarded as an inhabitant of his mūlagrāma Bhaṇḍārisama, district Darbhanga. There is a temple of goddess Bāṇeśvarī in the village. The goddess is said to have been installed by Bāṇa. Some say that during the Muslim invasion from all sides, Bāṇa's daughter, with a view to pressing her chastity, prayed the Almighty and was herself turned into an icon of stone.

This Bāṇa is quite different from his name sake, the celebrated author of the Harṣacarita and the Kādambarī. According to the Maithila tradition Bāṇakavi was a friend Vācaspati Jhā, brother of MM. Rucipati, the author of a commentary on the Anargharāghavanāṭaka of Murāri. Since Rucipati enjoyed the patronage of Mahārāja Bhairavasimha, Singh has rightly placed him in the second half of the fifteenth century² A.D.. It is said, Vācaspati composed a verse condoling the sad demise of his friend.³ Some ascribe that verse to one Vidyāpati, brother of Vācaspati.

The Parvatī pariṇaya is a drama containing five acts. The theme is the same as that of the Kumārasambhava. In the description of the marriage of Śiva and Pārvatī the marriage-rites of Mithilā have been dramatised. The drama is a mediocre one.

1. R. Schmidt, Leipzig, 1917.

2. Vide History of Tirhut, p.116.

3. Vide ibid. The verse begins with 'dvastaḥ kāṇvākyameruḥ' et seq.

The last verse of the Virudāvatī composed by Digambara Ṭhakkura¹ tells us that he had written a drama entitled Uṣākarabandha but since it is lost we are unable to throw any light on it.

MM. Harihara² is the author of two dramas, the Bhartṛharinirveda and the Prabhā vatīpariṇaya. The former is the only play based on a literary character. It is based on the immense popularity of the scholar - king. it deals with the desolation of Bhartṛhari by the death of his wife consequent upon the reported rumour of his own demise. By the consolation of a yogī his chagrin is changed into a state of complete indifference towards mundane affairs, so that, when recalled to life, neither his wife nor her child has any attraction for him. The play is divided into five acts. MM. Mukunda Jhā Bakṣī wrote a commentary on it. It is styled Sukhabodhinī.³

The *Prabhāvatīpariṇaya*⁴ is a seven-act drama, depicting the love-story of Pradyumna son of Lord Kṛṣṇa and Prabhāvatī, daughter of Vajranābha, a demon. The plot is based on the adhyāya-s 21 to 27 of the Viṣṇuparvan of the Harivaṃśapurāṇa. Thus the theme is puranic. All other elements of a characteristic sanskrit drama are present in it. The predominating poetic sentiment is the Erotic. The Heroic is taken recourse to in the description of Pradyumna's war with Vajranābha, in which the latter is killed. A divine she-swan, Śucimukhī by name, comes down all the way from heaven to Vajranābhapura, the city of the demon and sons

1. For details vide supra p.14.

2. For details vide supra pp.15-16.

3. Published, Vidya Vilas Press, Kāśī.

4. Published Chowkhamba, Vārāṇasī, 1969.

destruction." It is highly philosophical and a bit difficult to comprehend. It portrays the evils of worldly existence. It appears that the dramatist has followed in the foot-steps of Śrīkrṣṇa Miśra, the author of the drama, entitled Prabodhacandrodaya. The first act of the Amṛtodaya is called śravaṇa-sampatti; the second mananasiddhi; the third nididhyāsandharma sampatti; the fourth ātmadarśana and the last apavargapratiṣṭhā. The dramatis personae are mostly abstract, e.g., śruti, Ānvikṣikī, parāmarṣa, pakṣatā, śraddhā nirveda, vividiṣā etc. Patañjali, Jābālī, Viduṣaka, Kaṇṇukī and others fall in the category of concrete characters. The verses are abstruse. There is a commentary on it styled Saralā by MM. Mukunda Jhā Bakṣī.¹

The Muditamadālasanāṭaka is a drama written by MM. Gokulanātha himself, although in the beginning of the drama the Sūtradhāra calls it 'kumāraśrī narendrasāhanibaddham' (Composed by Kumāra Narendrasāhe). The kti-pratyaya in the word nibaddha is an instance of antarbhāvitanyartha (causative-sense implied therein) and as such it means 'kāritam' and not 'kṛtam'. There is not an iota of doubt regarding the authorship of the present drama. For, first, there is the similarity of technique of self-introduction by the dramatist through goddess Sarasvatī in the concluding portions of the dramas, the Amṛtodaya and the Muditamadālasa. Second verse from the latter have been quoted by the dramatist in his *Kāvyaprakāśavivaraṇa*² with

1. Published with the Muzaffarpur edition.

2. Vide pp.156-157 and 161; compare pp.87 and 53 of the drama.

unambiguous remarks 'yathā madīyamadālasāyām (as in my Madālasā).

This drama consists of seven acts. Its theme is the story of love and adventure culminating in the marriage of Madālasā, daughter of Viśvāvasu with Satyadhvaja, named Kuvalayāśva by his father king Śatrujit at the instance of sage Gālava, narrated in the Markaṇḍeyapurāṇa.¹

In this drama the dramatists dramatic talent finds expression in the description of the accessories of sacrifice,² the terrific speech of the horse,³ the palace of the demon,⁴ the battle,⁵ the dream world⁶ and the like. Wit and humour find place in Medhātithi's description of the manner of riding a horse⁷ as well as his description of the courtesan in the city.⁸ And nothing can be more pathetic than the description of Viśvāvasu, a bereaved father, kissing the foot-prints of Madālasā, his daughter, with wide-stretched lips and not touching them far fear of being disfigured.⁹ Queer imagination of the dramatist in certain cases are worthy of note¹⁰ and so is verbal jugglery.¹¹ At interests these are certain

1. vide adhyāya-s XXI - XXIV of the edition by Paṇḍita Jivānanda Vidyāsāgara, Saraswati Press, Calcutta, 1879.

2. Vide Muditamadālasa - p.25.

3. ibid. pp.19-21.

4. ibid. pp.55-56.

5. ibid. act IV.

6. ibid. p.52.

7. ibid. p.8.

8. ibid. p.11.

9. ibid. p.5 (verse No 14).

10. ibid. p.15 (verse No 27).

11. ibid. pp. 114-116 and 117-119.

verse composed in a terse style characteristic of śāstrīya-treatises. They remind the reader of the warning given by the author of the Naiṣadhīyacarita:-

'ma 'smin khalaḥ khelatu'¹

MM. JAGADDHARA alias JAGANNĀTHA

MM. Jagaddhara alias Jagannātha Upādhyāya is the younger brother of MM. Gokulanātha Upādhyāya. He composed a drama, entitled the *Atandra-candrikā*² for his patron king Phate sāha of garhwal. He was "the tenth guru of Goṃḍhi Miśra's school of Śarayantrin-s".³ Vidyākara cites three verses of Jagannātha in his anthology styled Vidyākaraśaṣṭaka.⁴

The *Gitadigambara*⁵ of Moho. Varṇasamāṇi Jhā⁶ is a drama composed to be staged on the occasion of the Tulāpuruṣadāna by Pratāpamalla of Kaṭhamāṇḍu in 1577 of the śaka era, corresponding to 1655 A.D. The purpose behind its composition was to entertain the princes and scholars invited to witness the ceremony.

-
1. One is also reminded of the following famous Maithilī-saying :- gokulanātha pihānī bhāna / paṇḍita nothī se bujhathi sujana //.
 2. Catalogus Catalogorum - I - p.196; a copy of the manuscript is preserved in the Patna University Library, Patna.
 3. vide p.322 of R. Jhā's paper 'The declaration of a Śarayantrī' - A.I.O.C. XIIth session; vide also G. Jhā : Kavirahasya - pp. 73-74.
 4. Vese Nos 396, 397 and 443.
 5. Vide Cat. Cat. III - 33; H.P. Shashi - Reports I-18.
 6. For details vide supra p.19.

the seed of love for Pradyumna in Prabhāvatī's heart. She hands over the portrait of the lovely and loving heroine to the hero. The hero also turns love-lorn and resolves to obtain her by all means. Śucimukhī gives Pradyumna's portrait as well to Prabhāvatī. The first three acts depict pangs of separation. Acts four to six present a picture of pleasures of union. The final union follows the death of the demon by the hero in the last act. The episodes of love-letter, the heroine being vexed by a black-bee and entry of the hero at the opportune moment remind the spectator of the Abhijñānaśakuntala.

In the final, i.e., the fifth dr̥ṣṭi of the Kāvyaḍākinī, solely devoted to an exposition of poetic blemishes, the author, Kavīndra gaṅgānanda,¹ while illustrating ananga-parivartana refers to a nāṭikā of his, entitled the Mandārāmañjarī.² Unfortunately, it is not available.

MM. Gokulanāthā,³ a polyhistor composed two dramas entitled the *Amṛtodaya*⁴ and the Muditamadālasa.⁵

The Amṛtodaya is a five-act allegorical drama describing "the progress of jīva from creation to

1. For details vide supra pp.17-19.

2. cf. "yathā mama mandārāmañjaryām rājñāḥ svayam kṛtam vasantavarṇanam anādyā vandivarṇanaprasaṁsanam" - - Kavīndragāṅgānandagranthāvalī - p.169, Edited by the present writer and published by the Mithila Research Institute, Darbhanga, 1988.

3. For details vide supra pp.22-25.

4. Published, N.S.P., Bombay, 1897; also Vijay Press, Muzaffarpur, 1925. There is a Vārāṇasī - edition as well.

5. For details of publication vide supra p.68 (Ref 130).

destruction." It is highly philosophical and a bit difficult to comprehend. It portrays the evils of worldly existence. It appears that the dramatist has followed in the foot-steps of Śrīkṛṣṇa Miśra, the author of the drama, entitled Prabodhacandrodaya. The first act of the Amṛtodaya is called śravaṇa-sampatti; the second mananasiddhi; the third nididhyāsandharma sampatti; the fourth ātmiadarśana and the last apavargapratīṣṭhā. The dramatis personae are mostly abstract, e.g., śruti, Ānvik śikī, parāmarṣa, pakṣatā, śraddhā nirveda, vividīṣā etc. Patañjali, Jābāli, Viduṣaka, Kaṇcukī and others fall in the category of concrete characters. The verses are abstruse. There is a commentary on it styled Suralā by MM. Mukunda Jhā Bakṣī.¹

The Muditamadālasanāṭaka is a drama written by MM. Gokulanātha himself, although in the beginning of the drama the Sūtradhāra calls it 'kumāraśrī narendrasāhanibaddham' (Composed by Kumāra Narendrasāhe). The kleśa-pratyaya in the word nibaddha is an instance of antarbhāvitanyartha (causative-sense implied therein) and as such it means 'kāritam' and not 'kṛtam'. There is not an iota of doubt regarding the authorship of the present drama. For, first, there is the similarity of technique of self-introduction by the dramatist through goddess Sarasvatī in the concluding portions of the dramas, the Amṛtodaya and the Muditamadālasa. Second verse from the latter have been quoted by the dramalist in his *Kāvya prakāśavivarana*² with

1. Published with the Muzaffarpur edition.

2. Vide pp.156-157 and 161; compare pp.87 and 53 of the drama.

unambiguous remarks 'yathā madīyamadālasāyām (as in my Madālasā).

This drama consists of seven acts. Its theme is the story of love and adventure culminating in the marriage of Madālasā, daughter of Viśvāvasu with Satyadhvaja, named Kuvalayāśva by his father king Śatrujit at the instance of sage Gālava, narrated in the Markaṇḍeyapurāṇa.¹

In this drama the dramatists dramatic talent finds expression in the description of the accessories of sacrifice,² the terrific speech of the horse,³ the palace of the demon,⁴ the battle,⁵ the dream world⁶ and the like. Wit and humour find place in Medhātithi's description of the manner of riding a horse⁷ as well as his description of the courtesan in the city.⁸ And nothing can be more pathetic than the description of Viśvāvasu, a bereaved father, kissing the foot-prints of Madālasā, his daughter, with wide-stretched lips and not touching them far fear of being disfigured.⁹ Queer imagination of the dramatist in certain cases are worthy of note¹⁰ and so is verbal jugglery.¹¹ At interests these are certain

1. vide adhyāya-s XXI - XXIV of the edition by Paṇḍita Jivānanda Vidyāsāgara, Saraswati Press, Calcutta, 1879.

2. Vide Muditamadālasa - p.25.

3. ibid. pp.19-21.

4. ibid. pp.55-56.

5. ibid. act IV.

6. ibid. p.52.

7. ibid. p.8.

8. ibid. p.11.

9. ibid. p.5 (verse No 14).

10. ibid. p.15 (verse No 27).

11. ibid. pp. 114-116 and 117-119.

verse composed in a terse style characteristic of śāstriya-treatises. They remind the reader of the warning given by the author of the Naiṣadhīyacarita:-

'ma 'smin khalah̥ khelatu'¹

MM. JAGADDHARA alias JAGANNĀTHA

MM. Jagaddhara alias Jagannātha Upādhyāya is the younger brother of MM. Gokulanātha Upādhyāya. He composed a drama, entitled the *Atandra-candrikā*² for his patron king Phate sāha of garhwal. He was "the tenth guru of Goṃḍhi Miśra's school of Śarayantrin-s".³ Vidyākara cites three verses of Jagannātha in his anthology styled Vidyākarasahasraka.⁴

The *Gitadigambara*⁵ of Moho. Vamśamaṇi Jhā⁶ is a drama composed to be staged on the occasion of the Tulāpuruṣadāna by Pratāpamalla of Kaṭhamāṇḍu in 1577 of the śaka era, corresponding to 1655 A.D. The purpose behind its composition was to entertain the princes and scholars invited to witness the ceremony.

-
1. One is also reminded of the following famous Maithilī-saying :- gokulanātha pihānī bhāna / paṇḍita nothi se bujhathi sujana //.
 2. Catalogus Catalogorum - I - p.196; a copy of the manuscript is preserved in the Patna University Library, Patna.
 3. vide p.322 of R. Jhā's paper 'The declaration of a Śarayantrī' - A.I.O.C. XIIth session; vide also G. Jhā : Kavirahasya - pp. 73-74.
 4. Vese Nos 396, 397 and 443.
 5. Vide Cat. Cat. III - 33; H.P. Shashi - Reports I-18.
 6. For details vide supra p.19.

In the seventeenth century A.D. many three-language-formula-dramas were written in which Govinda Miśra's Nalacarita based on the Mahābhārata, Rāmadāsa Jhā's four-act nāṭikā, Ānandavijaya depicting the supernatural love of the Divine Couple Rādhā and Kṛṣṇa and Devānanda's Uṣāharaṇa based on the Śrīmadbhāgavata are treated by Sanskrit scholars as Sanskrit plays and not Maithilī dramas.

In the eighteenth century A.D. Bālakavi Kṛṣṇadatta.¹ composed two dramas, namely, the Kuvalayāśvīya and the Purañjanacarita.

The *Kuvalayāśvīya*² is a seven-act drama based on a part of the story of Madālasā and Kuvalayāśva narrated in the Mārkaṇḍeya-purāṇa. No vital deviation from the source has been made by the dramatist. The demon appearing in the garb of an ascetic to cheat Kuvalayāśva in the sixth act of the drama is named Dhūmaketu,³ whereas in the Mārkaṇḍeyapurāṇa and the Muditamadālasa of Gokulanātha he is called Tālaketu. Kṛṣṇadatta's style is simple, natural and forceful. The description of Vārāṇasī and tapovana are fine. He is very much influenced by the dramas of Kālidāsa and Bhavabhūti. At places he has not only borrowed the ideas but also their phraseology.

1. For details vide supra pp.27-29.

2. vide Mitra - Notices - vol. VI - No 2035; Des. Cat. of Mss in Mithila - vol.II - No 32, incomplete copies of the ms are preserved in K.S.D.S.U. Library, Darbhanga (Bundle No 345, ms. Nos.1 and 35) and G.J.K.S. Vidyapeeth, Allahabad (No nā 5008/17).

3. This information is based on the summary of the sixth act of the drama published in Mitra's Notices.

The *Purañjanacarita*¹ comprises five acts. The source of the drama is the story of Purañjana narrated in the fourth skandha of Śrīmadbhāgavata.² From the prologue of the drama it is evident that the drama was staged in the court of Devājīpanta near the gate of Veṅkateśakeśava.

In both the dramas of Kṛṣṇadatta varieties of metres and figures of speech pertaining to word and meaning have been used. besides, the dramas abound in fine wise-sayings (sūkti-s) which are still remembered in Mithilā.

MM. Parameśvara Jhā (1856-1924)³ wrote a drama, styled Mahiṣāsura-vadha,⁴ based on the Durgāsaptasatī forming part of the Mārkaṇḍeyapurāṇa.

MM. Harṣanāthā Jhā⁵ (1847-1898) composed two five-act dramas, Uṣāharṇa and Mādhavānanda. The former depicts the story of Uṣā and Aniruddha as narrated in the Śrīmadbhāgavata. Based on the Rāsapañcādhyāyī of the Śrīmadbhāgavata and the Harivaṁśa the latter portrays the amorous sports of the Divine Couple, Rādhā and Kṛṣṇa. He also wrote two more dramas Rādhākṛṣṇanilanānāṭaka, also called, Siddhāśramatīlā and Sudāmacarita.

DEVAKĪNANDANA

Maho. Devakinandana alias Mukunda alias Madhusūdana Miśra was the son of Būḍhana and

-
1. Edited by Dr. S.L. Katre, Vidarbha Samshodh Mandal, Nagpur.
 2. vide adhyāya-s XXV-XXIX.
 3. For details vide supra p.42.
 4. vide Mithila-tattva-vimarśa - vol. II p.111.
 5. For details vide supra pp.38-39.

grand-son of Abhirāma of the Hāṭī-branch of the Sodarapura-family. He was a Naiyāyika patronized by Mahārāja Maheśvara Simha (1850-1860) of the Khaṇḍabala-family and it was at his court that Devakīnandana composed his only literary work - a four-act drama, *Jānakī-pariṇaya*¹ with the marriage of Sītā and Rāma as its theme.²

Bhānunātha composed Maithilī-cum-Sanskrit drama, Prabhāvatīharaṇa by name, at the instance of his patron Mahārāja Maheśvara-simha. Like many other dramas of this type it is a mixed dramatic composition.

ŚIVANANDANA MIŚRA

Śivanandana Miśra was an inhabitant of village Debhārī. Born in 1880 A.D., he was a pupil of MM. Kṛṣṇasimha Thakkura and a protege of Janeśvarasimha of the khaṇḍabalā-family. His Gajānanacarita,³ a seven-act play is the only work of Śivanandana available to us. It depicts the valour of Lord Gaṇeśa. The chief sentiment of the play is the Heroic. The verses are all composed in a forceful style. The dialogue between Skanda and Gaṇeśa is amusing.

Śivanandana passed away in 1930 A.D.

1. Published, Union Press, Darbhanga, 1894.

2. cf. sītārāma vivāharīvalitaṁ sindhuprabandhām vaitam / kartuṁ svalpataraṁ sunāṭakam ahaṁ sveṣṭapradam prārābhe //.

3. A copy of the ms is preserved in the Mithila Research Institute, Darbhanga - Ms No 499/589. The drama has also been referred to by R.K. Chaudhary in his article published in J.B.R.S. - XLIII - pt 2 p.59.

RAVINĀTHA JHĀ

Ravinātha Jha, son of Bābūdatta Jhā came of the Rajaurā-branch of the Māṇḍara-family. He belonged to Kāśyapa-gotra. He lived in village Ṭhāḍhī. A great grammarian of his time Ravinātha was the head of the department of grammar at D.S.S. College, Muzaffarpur. He wrote a drama styled Arghyalambodara, depicting the life and adventures of Lord Gaṇeśa.

Devīkānta Ṭhakkura¹ composed a drama, Mahiśāsuraavadha by name, based on the Durgā-saptasatī.

ṚDDHINĀTHA JHĀ

Ṛddhinātha Jh, son of MM. Harṣanātha Jhā of the Sakarāḍhī-family was born in 1890. He lived in village Śāradāpura, Ujāna, Darbhanga district. He passed away in 1970 A.D. He wrote five dramatic composition. They are as follows:-

(a) *Śaśikalāpariṇayanāṭaka*²

(b) *Pūrṇakāma*³

(c) *Prasādanāṭaka*⁴

(d) *Dakṣiṇāmūrtināṭaka*⁵

(e) *Aparapravāsanāṭaka*⁶

1. For details vide supra p.48.

2. Published Raj Press, Darbhanga, 1947.

3. Printed at Darbhanga Press Company (Pvt.) Ltd., Darbhanga in san 1368 Fasli and published by the Late Umānātha Miśra of Katihar.

4. The ms is preserved with Dr. Śaśinātha Jhā of K.S.D.S.U., Darbhanga.

5. Preserved ibid.

6. Preserved ibid.

Of these the first two are published and the last three unpublished. The first was written to be staged on the auspicious occasion of the Yajñopavīta of the late Kumāra Jiveśvara śiṃha, the eldest of the nephews of the late Mahārājādhirāja Kāmeśvara-śiṃha. The second was composed on the occasion of the birth of a grand-son to the late Umānātha Miśra of Katihar.

The Śaśikalāpariṇaya is a small play in seven acts. It deals with the marriage of Śaśikalā, daughter of Subāhu with sudarśana, son of Bhāradvāja. The first act is called nāyikālīdayagatabhāvaprakāśa; the second svasvadūtaprasthāpana; the third Kāśīprasthāna; the fourth pariṇayasamudyoga and the last Varaprāpti.

The Pūrṇakāma is a one-act play with the adbhuta-rasa as its principal sentiment, śṛṅgāra, hāsyā, bhayānaka and karuṇa are subordinate. The play is named after the hero - Pūrṇakāma, a young sage engaged in penance. Indra, jealous by nature, sends cupid and divine damsels to disturb him. They, however, do not succeed in getting their plans executed. Indra, at last, sends Mātali to bring Pūrṇakāma to the heaven. Pūrṇakāma reaches there but completely unattached to heavenly pleasures, he engages himself in penance on the holy celestial river Mandākinī. Indra feels proud of his success and is put to trouble. In fine, Nārada and Lord Viṣṇu come and take Pūrṇakāma to Vaikunṭhadhāma.

The Prasādanāṭaka contains only three acts. It deals with the struggle for independence and the role of Dr Rajendra Prasad in the freedom-movement and after independence.

The Dakṣiṇāmūrtināṭaka is a one-act play. It relates to the installation of Dakṣiṇāmūrti Śiva.

The Aparapravāsanāṭaka is also a one-act play based on an imaginary plot dealing with Rāma's visit to Janakapura, his father-in-law's capital, after he ascended the throne of Ayodhyā. It is humorous.

Girijānanda Jhā¹ wrote a small play entitled Dvikusuma. Gaṅgeśa Miśra² composed two dramas, *Gurudakṣiṇā*³ and Raghucarita.⁴ The forms comprises seven acts and deals with the story of kautsaś efforts for paying off gurudakṣiṇā to his guru, Varatantu. The latter is an account of the life and munificence of king Raghu.

Ānanda Jha⁵ composed three dramatic composition :-

- (a) *Hṛtparivartana*⁶
- (b) *Punassaṅgama*⁷
- (c) *Dahyaprathonmūlana*⁸

The first deals with the story of king Bhoja and his uncle Muñja. It depicts how the heart of Muñja who had sent his men to murder Bhoja, then a boy, but to usurp the throne, suddenly changed on going through the famous verse composed by Bhoja and

-
1. For details vide supra p.52.
 2. For details vide supra p.52.
 3. Published, Janata Press, Madhubani 1965.
 4. This information is reported by Paṇḍita Candeśvara Jhā, Retired Professor, Dept. of Sanskrit, L.N.M.U. Darbhanga.
 5. For details vide supra p.49.
 6. Published, K.S.D.S.U., Darbhanga, 1984.
 7. ibid., 1984.
 8. ibid. 1984.

sent to Muñja for perusal.¹ The Punassaṅgama depicts the story of Pārvatī and Śiva and the Dahyaprathonmūlana advocates the eradication of the social evil of dowry-system.

Gaṅgādhara Miśra² has written *Saptalā*³ - a collection of seven one-act plays.

Matinātha Miśra⁴ has composed a five-act drama entitled *Rāṣṭrabandhu*⁵ on the demolition and re-novation of the Somanātha-temple.

DR ŚAŚINĀTHA JHĀ

Dr Śaśinātha jhā of village Dūpa, district Madhubani is a teacher in the department of grammar in the K.S.D.S. University, Darbhanga. Born in 1954, he is engaged in publication of unpublished and out of print texts. He has written a dramatic composition, entitled *Pañjīprabandhanāṭaka*⁶ It dramatizes the history behind the compilation of pañjī-records in Mithilā. Besides, he has written a commentary on the Pārvatīpariṇaya of Bāṇa, Subodhinī by name.⁷ He has composed Madhudhārā, a collection of verses. It is unpublished following is the list of scholar of Mithilā, in alphabetical order, who have commented upon drśyakāvya-s :-

-
1. The verse beginning with 'māndhatā ca mahīpatiḥ / etc.
 2. For details vide supra pp.54-55.
 3. Published, Uday Press, Darbhanga, 1964.
 4. For details vide supra p.51.
 5. Published, Nag Prakashak, Delhi, 1995.
 6. Published, K.S.D.S.U., Darbhanga, 1986.
 7. Published K.S.D.S.U. Darbhanga, 1986.

1. Balabhadra - Dīpikā
on Hanumannāṭaka
2. Bhavanāthā Miśra
'Ayācī' - on Anargharāghava
3. Bhavāno D/o
Mahārāja
Dhīrasimha - Subodhajanikā
on Veṇisaṁhāra
4. Chatrakara śukla - on Anargharāghava
5. Citradhara - on Anargharāghava
6. Daśaratha - on Mālatīmādhava
7. Dhameśvara - on Anargharāghava
8. Dharmānanda - on Anargharāghava
9. Gaṇeśadatta - Uddhāra
on Mālatīmādhava
10. Gaṅgānātha Jhā - Bhāvabodhinī on Prasannarāghava
11. Gokulanātha - Ṭippaṇa on his own Muditamadālasa
12. Graheśvara - Mudrādīpikā
on Mudrārākṣasa
13. Harihara - on Mālatīmādhava
on Anargharāghava
14. Jagaddhara - on Veṇisaṁhāra
on Mālatīmādhava
on Prabhāvatipariṇaya
15. Jīvanāthā alias
Ām̐khī Jhā - Vivṛti
on Abhijñānaśakuntala
16. Kṛṣṇa - on Anargharāghava
17. Lakṣmīdhara - on Anargharāghava

18. Mohanadāsa
Miśra - on Hanumannāṭaka
19. Mukunda Jhā Bakṣī - Saralā
on Amṛtodaya
- Sukhabodhini
- on Bharatphari-nirveda
- on Anargharāghava
20. Nānyadeva - on Mālatīmādhava
21. Naracandra - on Anargharāghava
22. Narahari Miśra - Tippanī
on Abhijñānaśakuntala
23. Prajāpati - on Mālatīmādhava
24. Pṛthvīdhara - on Mṛcchakaṭika
25. Rāmacandra - on Prasannarāghava
26. Rāmadāsa - on Prabodhacandrodaya
27. Rucīkara - Durnirūpaṇapadārthaviveka on Prabodhacandrodaya
28. Rucinātha - on Prabodhacandrodaya
29. Rucipati - on Anargharāghava on Uttararāmacarita
30. Śaṅkara
S/o Vāsudeva - Rasacandrikā
on Abhijñānaśakuntala
31. Śaṅkara - on Anargharāghava
32. Śaśinātha - on Pārvatīpariṇaya
33. Tripurāri - on Mālatīmādhava
34. Vateśvara - Mudrāprakāsa
on Mudrārākṣasa
35. Viṣṇudatta - on Anargharāghava

5. POETICS

DHARMADATTA

In his vivarāṇa on the Kāvya prakāśa MM. Gokulanātha refers to Nārāyaṇa and quoted from Dharmadatta in support of the view that there is only one rasa and that is adbhuta.¹ This Dharmadatta is a "Mithila rasa-writer".² Viśvanātha, the author of the Sāhityadarpaṇa refers to his grand-father vanquishing Dharmadatta at the court of Mahārājā Narasimhadeva of Kaliṅga.³ Dr. Śaśinātha Jhā has tried to prove that Dharmeśvara alias Dharmadatta S/o Gaṅgeśvara of the Brahmapura-branch of the Darihara-family was the victor and not the Vanquished in the Śāstrārtha in the court of the said king.⁴ This Dharmeśvara alias Dharmadatta was, according to Dr Jha, the great grand-father of Amareśvara alias Amareśa, the author of the Dhūrtavidambana-prahasana.⁵ Professor Bhattacharya assigns 1235 A.D. to Dharmadatta, son of Vācaspati.⁶ Since the name of father differs the

1. vide p.144.

2. vide Introduction to the Kāvya prakāśa-viveka Vol. I - p.57.

3. cf. yadāhuḥ śrīkaliṅgabhūmaṇḍalā-khaṇḍalamahārājādhirāja śrīnarasimha sabhāyām dharmadattam sthagayantāḥ sakalasahḍayagoṣṭhīgariṣṭhakavipaṇḍitā smatpitāmaheśrīman-nārāyaṇadāsa pādāḥ"

4. vide his paper in Saṃskṛtasammelana dated 31.3.1994.

5. vide supra p.91.

6. vide his paper, entitled "Viśvanathakavirāja and his references to some forgotten ālaṅkārika-s" published in the Journal of Oriental Institute, vol. III - No 4 - pp.357-365.

identity appears to be doubted. Dharmadatta is also cited in the Rasapradīpa of Prabhākara composed in 1583 A.D.¹

This thirteenth century writer of Mithilā on poetics is the earliest known to us. Unfortunately, we have not been able to discover his work.

SIMHABHŪPĀLA

Simhabhūpāla flourished in the fourteenth century. He composed a short treatise on poetics, Rasārṇavasudhākara by name. In all his commentaries Mallināthā has cited from it. Another work of Simhabhūpāla relates to Music. It is called Vyākhyā-saṅgīta, a commentary on the Saṅgītaratnākara of Śārṅgadeva. Miśra identifies him with Bhūpālasimha, a Maithila king of the Kārṇāṭa-family.² Regarding Rasārṇa vasudhākara Prof. Bhattacharya maintains that it is "very likely a compilation of Mithilā."³ In Mithilā, we have Maithilī songs composed by simhabhūpati or Simhabhūpāla. Kamaleśa is of opinion that it was Śivasimha who compiled the two works assuming the name Simhabhūpala.

The *Candrāloka*⁴ of Pīyūṣavarṣa Jayadeva⁵ is divided into ten chapters, called Mayūkha. All the topics pertaining to poetics have been discussed in a very simple language. The first half of the verses

1. S.K. De : History of Sanskrit Poetics - p.216.

2. History of Maithili Literature - Vol.I - p.242.

3. vide his paper in the Journal of Oriental Institute - vol. VIII - No 4.

4. Published, N.S.P. Bombay, 1915.

5. For details vide supra pp.90-91.

are definitions and the second half are illustrations thereof.

MM. GOVINDA ṬHAKKURA

MM. Govinda Ṭhakkura, was the eldest of the three sons of MM. Keśava Ṭhakkura by his first wife, Sono. He was younger than Rucikara, the elder of the two sons of Keśava by his second wife. Rucikara loved Govinda much¹ and the latter learnt the quintessence of the kāvya-sāhitya from the former.

MM. Govinda's father, MM. Keśava was the son of MM. Buddhikara and the grand-son of MM. Ravikara of the Nagavāra-branch of the illustrious Ghusauta-family of the Śrottriya-s of Mithilā. This family like the Sodarapurā and Khaṇḍabala-families has the unique distinction of producing generations of Sanskrit scholars of note.

The Kāvyapradīpa of MM. Govinda, though a commentary on the kāvyapvakāśa of Mammaṭa, is adjudged, by scholars, an independent epoch-making work in the annals of Sanskrit poetics. Govinda is an ālankārika of high order. It is erudition in rhetoric discipline has rightly been eulogized by MM. Devanātha in his Kāvyakaumudī.² Govinda was a versatile genius. His son, MM. Devanāthā, in his

1. vide kāvyapradīpa - verse No 1 (ab).

2. cf. *ya eṣa kurute mano vipadī gauravīṇām girām sa vāmana ivāmbare hariṇālāṇchanam vāñchasi / lilakhiṣati simhikāramaṇakesaram Pheruvat
patanga iva pāvakaṁ nṛhariṣā vakam dhāvati ||*

*Mantrakaumudī*¹ calls him 'mīmāṃsāguru',² *Vedāntasiddhāntavācaspati*³ and sakalatantra-sarojabhāsvān.⁴ In the realm of Nyāya he is said to have surpassed even the great Ācārya, Udayana.⁵ He is further called *tarkatantraramaṇīkamanīyakakānta*⁶

On the ground of the presence of his descendants in village Bhaṭasimmari certain scholars are of opinion that that is the village Govinda lived in.⁷ Dr. Miśra holds that Bhaduāra is the native village of Govinda.⁸ Kaviśekhara Badarīnātha Jhā opines that Govinda lived in village Gaṅganlī⁹

Govinda himself says that he composed two works with names ending in pradīpa and two with names ending in dīpikā.¹⁰ They are as follows :-

1. Kāvyapradīpa
2. Pūjāpradīpa
3. *Udāharaṇadīpikā*¹¹

1. Published, Mithila research Institute, Darbhanga 1960.

2. vide p.1 (verse No 4).

3. ibid.

4. ibid. (verse No 3).

5. cf. ācārya 'pi vicāryate yadavadhir naiyāyiko vā na vā - ibid verse No 4 (c).

6. op.cit., - p.190 (verse No 23(a).

7. vide Mithilā-tattva-vimarsa - I - p.226.

8. vide History of Maithilī literature I p.222.

9. vide Introduction (p.2.) to the Rasataraṅgiṇī of Rāmānanda Thakkura, published Mithila Research Institute, Darbhanga, 1961.

10. vide kāvyapradīpa p.403.

11. According to S.K. De it is "apparently same as Ślokaḍīpikā in Stein - p.XXVIII - 60, 269; cited by Nāgojībhaṭṭa, vide History of Sanskrit Potics - p.163.

4. *Kāvya-dīpikā*¹

Besides, one more work Kṛṣṇastotra, a devotional composition is ascribed to MM. Govinda Ṭhakkura²

The Udāharaṇa-dīpikā is an expository treatise calculated to explain the illustrative verses pertaining to the kāvya-prakāśa. It has been cited by Vaidyanātha Tatsat in his Udāharaṇa-candrikā.³ The only fragments of the Udāharaṇa-dīpikā available to us are by way of quotations in posterior works.⁴

So far as the date of Govinda is concerned, Bhat, after an examination of "a good deal of evidence both external and internal" has tried to prove that Govinda" flourished during circa 1465-1550 A.D."⁵

MM. Govinda's son, MM. Devanātha wrote a work on poetics, Rasikaprakāśa, besides kāvya-kaumudī, a commentary on the Kāvya-prakāśa.

The contribution of Kavirāja Bhānudatta⁶ to the

-
1. cf. P.V. Kane : History of Sanskrit Poetics - p.409; vide also Bhat's papers sentitled 'Mahā-mahopādhyāya Govinda Ṭhakkura - his date and works' published in the Journal of the University of Bombay - vol. XXVIII - New Series part II - September 1959 and styled 'Pujāpradīpa of Govinda Ṭhakkura' published in the Bhāratīya Vidyā - Vol. XXVI - Nos 1-4, 1966.
 2. vide p.93 of the paper contributed by the late Paṇḍita Trilokanatha Miśra in the Mithilāṅka number of the Mithila Mihir; vide also Singh : History of Tirhut p.132.
 3. vide pp.50, 52, 84 et. seq.
 4. vide p.3 of introduction to the Mantrakaumudī.
 5. vide pp.132-133 of his paper referred to above published in the Journal of the University of Bombay.
 6. For details vide supra pp.8-11.

three chapters respectively. The fourth has for its subject matter an analysis of the sāttvika-emotions and the fifth deals with the variant-emotions. The sixth is an account of the nature of the Erotic sentiment. A discussion on the nature of the process of the realization of poetic sentiment is the theme of the seventh and the last is a miscellany.

In the Rasatarāṅgiṇī Bhānudatta has introduced a ninth sāttvika-emotion, called 'jṛmbhā'.¹ In he has cited a verse from the Rasaratnadhīpikā,² traditionally attributed to his father MM. Gaṇapati.

Since in his Rasatarāṅgiṇī Bhānudatta tells us that he has dealt with the various types of heroes and heroines in his work, entitled Rasa-mañjarī,³ it is evident that the latter was composed earlier the former.

The Alaṅkāratilaka is divided into five chapters, called pariccheda. The first deals with the different forms of style and diction; the second delineates poetic blemishes; the third is devoted to an elucidation of the nature of poetic excellence; The fourth concerns with poetic embellishments pertaining to word and the last depicts those relating to meaning. The self-composed illustrations interspersed with the verse of the author's father are fine pieces of poetry. He craves the indulgence of art-connoisseurs and requests them to treat this Alaṅkāramañjarī of his as an ornament. Since, after the present work is composed, great rhetoricians

1. Vide ibid. p.198.

2. Vide, ibid. p.181.

3. vide ibid. p.218.

like Daṇḍin and Vāmana are all shoved to the background.¹

Dr. J.B. Chaudhuri refers to one Kāvya-dīpikā of Bhānudatta.² The book is published but inspite of repeated efforts we could not procure a copy thereof.

Bhānudatta is also traditionally credited with the authorship of one Śṛṅgārādīpikā but, as no manuscript of it is available, nothing can be said regarding its corpus with any degree of certainty.

In the Alaṅkāratilaka Bhānudatta refers to his Citracandrikā.³ From the name of the work and the manner in which the reference to it has been made, it appears reasonable to infer that probably the work is concerned with an elucidation of the nature of citra-kāvya but, since no manuscript of the said work is available, we are groping in darkness so far as its details are concerned.

Bhānudatta is also traditionally believed to have written an auto-commentary on his Rasamañjarī but the same is not available.

KEŚAVA MIŚRA

Keśava Miśra, the author of the Alaṅkāra-śekhara hailed from Mithilā. He was the son of MM. Narahari and the grand-son of MM. Paramaguru Vācaspati and the great-grand-son of Sanmiśra Giripati of the Samauti-branch of the Pālī-family. He

1. cf. daṇḍīyati yoto daṇḍī Vāmanī yati vāmanah /
ṣad alaṅkāratilakam dhīrāḥ kurvansu bhūṣaṇam //

2. vide Muslim patronage to Sanskrit Learning vol. I - pp.2-3.

3. cf. 'citragūḍhaprahelikāpraśnottarāṇi citracandrikāyām darśayīṣyāmaḥ' - vide kavirājabhānudattagranthāvalī - p.295.

belonged to the Vatsagotra. He is credited with the authorship of the Dvaitapariśiṣṭa, a supplement to the Dvaitanirṇaya of his grand-father, Vācaspati.

Before composing the Alaṅkāraśekhara Keśava had already written, as he himself says, seven treatises on poetics but they were all written in a dialectic style comprehensible only by those well-versed in logical discipline and hence he changed his pattern in the Alaṅkāraśekhara.¹ Unfortunately, none of these seven works adverted to above is available. keśava, however, has referred to two of them. They are : *Alaṅkārasarvasva*² and Kāvyaaratna.³

Keśava was a protege of Mahārāja Māṇikyacandra, son of Mahārāja Dharma-candra and grand-son of Mahārāja Rāma-candra of Kota-kangra and it was at his instance that he composed the Alaṅkāra-śekhara. Māṇikyacandra succeeded his father in 1563 A.D.⁴ This places on author in the sixteenth century A.D. and this is in consonance with the age assigned to his grand-father, Vācaspati (1400-1490 A.D.).⁵ Besides, we are also informed of a ms of the Prakāśa-commentary of MM. Rucidatta

1. vide verse No 3, p.1 (NSP edition).

2. ibid., pp. 9 and 38.

3. ibid. p.72 (The name Vākyaratna mentioned on p.12 appears to be inadvertently used for Kāvyaarana. According to singh, the work cited twice is Vākyaratna, vide History of Tirhut p.133 foot-note 2. Nothing, however, can be pronounced finally).

4. vide cunningham : Archaeological Survey of India - Vol. V-p.160 (cf. De : History of Sanskrit Poetics - p.218, foot-note 3).

5. vide D.C. Bhattacharya : History of Navya-Nyāya in Mithilā - p.158.

on the Tattva-cintāmaṇi of Gaṅgeśa copied by Keśava; dated L.S.473, corresponding to 1592 A.D.¹

The Alaṅkāraśekhara is divided into eight sections, called ratna and twenty-two sub-sections, styled marīci. The kārikā-s are attributed to Śauddhodaṁ and the vṛtti-s are Keśava's. All the leading topics of poetics are dealt with in the work.

The *Rasatarāṅgiṇī*² of Rāmānanda Ṭhakkura³ is complete in seven chapters, called tarāṅga. It has for its theme a comprehensive study of the nature of different varieties of heroes and heroines. As is the case with similar other treatises of this nature so very characteristic of maithilā, the Rasatarāṅgiṇī also contains illustrative verses composed by the author himself.

Rāmānanda has introduced a new variety of the mugdhā-type of heroine. It is called *jñātājñātasvayauvanā*⁴

Kavīndra Gaṅgānanda⁵ composed the following works on poetics :-

(a) *Karṇabhūṣaṇa*⁶

(b) *Kāvyaḍākinī*⁷

1. vide Singh : History of Tirhut p.144 (foot-note 4).

2. Published Mithila Research Institute, Darbhanga 1961.

3. For details vide supra p.13.

4. For definition and illustration thereof vide pp.3-4.

5. For details vide supra pp.17-19.

6. Published, N.S.P. Bombay, 1902.

7. Published, Sarasvati Bhawan Texts, Benares, 1924.

(c) *Śṛṅgāraṇamālā*¹

(d) *Alasamodinī*²

The Karṇabhūṣaṇa consists of five chapters, called pariccheda, dealing with the nature of poetic sentiment (rasa). The first three chapters are devoted to an elucidation of its three accredited constituents, namely, adherent-cum-excitant, ensuant and variant in arial order. The fourth chapter concerns itself with the basic emotion, whereas the last has for its theme an exposition of the nature of the process of the realization of the poetic sentiment. Gaṅgānanda has given his own mellifluous verse saturated with devotion to Lord Kṛṣṇa as illustrations.

The Kāvyaḍākinī is a unique work – unique in the sense that it is devoted exclusively to the elucidation of the nature of poetic blemishes. It is divided into five chapters, called drṣṭi. The first chapter begins with the definition of poetic blemish and proceeds to classify it into five types : blemishes pertaining to a word; those pertaining to the part of a word; those relating to a sentence; those relative to the meaning and those concerning poetic sentiments. And then sixteen varieties of the first, i.e., poetic blemishes pertaining to a work are defined, explained and illustrated. The subsequent chapters deal with the remaining four classes of poetic blemishes in arial order.

In the Śṛṅgāraṇamālā the author establishes

-
1. Published; for the first time edited by the present author as a part of the Kavīndragāṅgā nandagranthāvalī, Mithila Research Institute, Darbhanga, 1988.
 2. Edited by the present author for the first time and published by VVRI, Hoshiarpur, 1964 in the journal of the Institute.

the supremacy of the erotic sentiment and following in the foot steps of Bhāmadatta proceeds to define and discuss the different types of heroines. he also gives his own verse as illustrations. His style is simple and lucid.

A special feature of the Śṛṅgāra-vaṇamālā is that Gaṅgānanda has introduced a new type of heroine, naming her āgacchat-patikā (one whose husband is on his way back to his abode to meet her). In support of his new classification he says that this variety of heroine cannot be subsumed under any other traditionally accepted variety. He starts discussing this type of heroine but the manuscript forming the basis of our edition breaks off in the last foot of the verse illustrating the mugdha-variety of this type of heroine.¹

The Alasamodinī is a composition meant for the beginner. The phraseology is very simple and only broad outlines have been presented. The work deals with the classification of different types of heroes and heroines and their moods and accessories. Divided into three reactions, entitled praṇaya, the Alasamodinī is a supplement to the author's other works on poetics.

The *Rasamahārṇava*² of MM. Gokulanāthā Upādhyāya³ is a work on poetics dealing with lakṣaṇā, but it appears to be a part of a voluminous work dealing with abhidhā and vyāñjanā as well.

-
1. Vide the present writer's paper entitled "The Śṛṅgāra-vaṇamālā of Kavīndra Gaṅgānanda of Mithilā" published in the G.J.K.S. Vidyapeeth, Allahabad, Vol.X - Jan.-Dec. Parts 1-4, 1984.
 2. Published, K.S.D.S. University, Darbhanga, 1981.
 3. For details vide supra pp.22-25.

MM. INDRAPATI

In the K.S.D.S. University is preserved a manuscript of an unnamed work on sanskrit poetics dealing with figures of speech¹. Unfortunately, the manuscript is incomplete. It breaks off in the middle and contains only the first twenty folio. But the portion available is, however, highly informative and it goes a long way in establishing the age and identity of the author.²

The author of the work is MM. Indrapati, the author of the Mīmāṃsā palvala. He was the son of MM. Rucipati and the grand-son of MM. Nīlakaṇṭha of the Behaṭa-branch of the Karamahā-family of the śrotriya-s of Mithilā. This MM. Nīlakaṇṭha was the younger brother of MM. Harihara, the author of the Sūktimuktāvalī alias Hariharasubhāṣita. Since MM. Indrapati had composed this work on figure of speech for the mental satisfaction of Nandīpati alias Bādari, a bhāṣā-kaṇ (Vernacular-poet), who was respected and honoured by Viṣṇusiṃha, the king of Mithilā, was ascended the throne in 1739 A.D., a date earlier than that cannot be assigned to the composition of the present work.

In addition to MM. Indrapati, these are two prominent writers of the 18th century A.D. who have contributed to Sanskrit poetics. They are Veṇḍatta and Citradhara.

1. MS no. 13 of bundle no. 292.

2. For details vide the present author's paper entitled "Some forgotten literateurs of Mithilā" published in J.B.R.S. - vol. XLVIII - pts I-IV Jan.-Dec. 1962.

VEṆĪDATTA

Veṇīdatta was the fifth son of Sadupādhyāya Jagannātha and grand-son of Kavi Jayakṛṣṇa of the same Behaṭa-branch of the Karamahā-family.¹ His younger sister Satīmahārānī became satī at the age of fourteen only in the year 1739 A.D. When her husband Mahārāja Rāghavasimha shuffled off his mortal coils. One of the sister of Veṇīdatta was married to Ekanātha Ṭhakkura, father of Mahārāja Mādhavasimha (1775-1807) of the Khaṇḍabalā-family. Veṇīdatta is said to have enjoyed the patronage of his sister's son, Mahārāja Mādhava.

The Rasakaustubha and the Alaṅkāra-mañjarī are the two works on poetics composed by Veṇīdatta.

The *Rasakaustubha*² deals with the poetic sentiments, the excitants, the adherents, the ensuants, the variants and the like in extenso. A detailed classification of the types of heroes and heroines is followed by the author's own definitions and illustrations. Some of his verses are amusing.³

The *Alaṅkāramañjarī*⁴ is a preliminary treatise on poetic embellishments, useful for the beginner. The definition of embellishments in simple language is followed by illustrative verse composed by the author himself. The verses are mostly mediocre and devoid of poetic charm. Some of the verses are but

1. vide the concluding verse of the Rasakaustubha.

2. Published; it has many editions.

3. vide the dialogue between Rādhā and Kṛṣṇa in the opening benedictory verse of the Rasa-kaustubha.

4. Published, Mithila Research Institute, Darbhanga, 1961.

slavish imitation of immortal pieces of poetry.¹ The Alaṅkāramañjarī is a last work. For, in it the author has cited verse from Rasakaustubha and Virudāvalī. The late kaviśekhara Badarīnātha Jhā, the learned editor of the Alaṅkāramañjarī, is of the opinion that Veṇīdatta had composed a Virudāvalī also probably to eulogize his sister's son and patron and from it a verse has been quoted in the Alaṅkāramañjarī.²

The *Śṛṅgārasāriṇī*³ of MM. Citradhara⁴ deals with the Erotic sentiment in all its different phases. The author has discussed in detail the nature of Śṛṅgāra, rati, Kāmadāśā, māna, nāyikā-s and nāyaka-s and their accessories. He has given fine verse as illustrations, most of which are his own. He records the views of the preceding theorists of poetry with due acknowledgement and gives his own emendations, wherever possible.

The *Vīrataraṅgiṇī*⁵ is a short treatise when compared to the Śṛṅgārasāriṇī. It deals with the Heroic sentiment exclusively. The four types of vīra-s : yuddhavīra, dānavīra, dayāvīra and dharmavīra have been discussed here in detail with copious illustrations, most of which are author's own.

Bhānunātha⁶ a protege of Mahārāja

-
1. Compare verse No 7 (p.2) with Mudrārākṣasa-Act I - verse - 1 and verse No 209 (p.42) with the Bhaṭṭikāvya - Canto II - Verse No 19.
 2. Vide Introduction.
 3. Edited and published by the present author with financial assistance from the Ministry of Education, Govt. of India, Darbhanga, 1965.
 4. For details vide supra p.27.
 5. Same as above (No 64).
 6. For details vide supra p.37.

Maheśvarasimha (1850-1860 A.D.) composed a small treatise on poetics, entitled Śṛṅgāra-mañjarī.¹ It contains fiftyeight verse in all composed in anuṣṭubh-metre and divided into two chapters, called ullāsa. The first deals with the nature of Śṛṅgāra-rasa - its definition and classification, the heroes and heroines, whereas the second presents the description of a heroine from top to toe and the definition of the four types of heroines, namely, Padminī, Citrīṇī, Hastinī and Śaṅkhinī. The simplicity of the style of the work makes it easily understandable to the neophyte.

Lekhanātha Jhā² composed a small manual of poetics, *Rasacandrikā*³ by name. It contains 194 verses only and deals with the various types of heroes and heroines. The author has supplied his own definitions and illustrations. The work is dedicated to his patron, Mahārājādhirāja Kameśvarasimha the last Mahārāja of the Khaṇḍabalā-family (1929-1962).

Kaviśekhara Badarīnātha Jhā⁴ wrote an independent digest on poetics, entitled Sāhitya-mīmāṃsā.⁵ In a short span of 69 verses only all main topics of poetics have been dealt with.

YADUNĀTHA MIŚRA

Yadunātha Miśra, the vetran scholar of Grammar and Logic, was born in 1885 A.D. in the

1. Edited by the present author of Shri Tantranath Jha felicitation volume, Darbhanga, 1980, pp.67-73.

2. For details vide supra p.44.

3. Published Vidyapati Press, Darbhanga San, 1347 fasli.

4. For details vide supra pp.45-47.

5. Published in Jha Commemoration Volume, Poona, 1937.

illustrious Sarisava-branch of the Sodarapura-family of the Śrotriya-s. He was the son of Paṇḍita Jayanātha Miśra. He lived in village Lālagañja, district Madhubani. He died a premature death in 1928 A.D. Among his Sāhityā-works the *Vyañjanāvāda*¹ deserves special mention. It discusses the nature of Vyañjanā (suggestion) and its place in the realm of the belles-lettres. The author establishes the ground for the admission of suggestion with remarkable perspicuity.

MM. Bālakṛṣṇa Miśra² composed two unpublished treatises on Sanskrit poetics, namely, Lakṣaṇāparikṣā and Vyaktinirāsa dealing with Lakṣaṇā and Vyañjanā respectively.

Ānanta Jhā³ composed Dhvanikallolīnī,⁴ a work dealing with the suggested meaning (dhvani) and Girijānanda Jhā⁵ wrote Alaṅkāarakusuma on figures of speech.

One Bhāva Miśra, son of Bhaṭṭaka Miśra is credited with the authorship of the Śṛṅgārasarāśī, a treatise on Erotic sentiment.⁶ An anthology, entitled Sabhyālaṅkaraṇa, also contains eleven verses composed by Bhāva Miśra.⁷ We are not certain if the two are identical. Sukhadeva Miśra's Śṛṅgāralatā and Śrīkara Miśra's Alaṅkāratilaka are also treated as

1. Published Vaishali Press, Muzaffarpur, 1922.

2. For details vide supra pp.44-45.

3. For details vide supra p.49.

4. Published K.S.D.S.U., Darbhanga, 1978.

5. For details vide supra p.52.

6. S.K. De : History of Sanskrit poetics - p.292.

7. Verse Nos 211, 214, 217, 218, 225, 244, 286, 372, 444, 452, and 567.

works of poetics by scholars of Mithilā.¹ One Śaṅkara Miśra of Mithilā is also credited with the authorship of Sāhityakalikā, a work on rhetoric and prosody.² One Upamākantuka, an unpublished work is ascribed to Hīraṇa. The learned editor of the Ekāvalī of MM. Gokulanātha tells us that Hīra and Hīraṇa are the names of MM. Bhīṣma Miśra himself who is the eighteenth century author of the Vṛttadarpaṇa,³ a work on prosody but since we have not been able to go through the work nothing can be said with certainty. He is treated as identical with the author of Gītaśaṅkara, comprising eleven cantos. Following is an alphabetical list of commentators hailing from Mithilā on works on Sanskrit poetics:-

1. Abhiṇavavācaspati Miśra
S/o Giripati Miśra - on Kāvyaaprakāśa
2. Acyuta Ṭhakkura - on Kāvyaaprakāśa
3. Ananta - Vyaṅgyārthakaumudī
on Rasamañjarī
4. Badarīnātha - Dīdhiti on Dhvanyāloka
- Surabhi on Rasamañjarī
- Candrikā
on Rasagaṅgādhara
5. Bahurūpa Miśra - on Daśarūpaka
6. Bhagīratha - on Kāvyaadarśa

-
1. Vide Dr. Jayamanta Miśra's paper entitled "Contribution of Bihar to Sanskrit Rhetoric" published in the Proceedings of the International Sanskrit Conference, Vol. I, Part I pp.125-128, New Delhi, 1975.
 2. Vide S.C. Banerji : Contribution of Bihar to Sanskrit literature p.127.
 3. Vide Introduction p. 'ṭa'.

7. Bhāskara Miśra - Sāhityadīpikā
on Kāvya prakāśa
8. Bhavadeva - Līlā
- on Kāvya prakāśa
9. Caturbhuja Miśra - Sāhityavilāsa on Kāvya prakāśa
10. Devanātha
Ṭhakkura - Kāvya kaumudī
on Kāvya prakāśa
11. Gaṅgānātha Jhā - (English translation of Kāvya prakāśa)
12. Gokulanatha
Upādhyāya - Vivaraṇa
- on Kāvya prakāśa
13. Govinda Ṭhakkura - Kāvya pradīpa
Udāharaṇadīpikā
on Kāvya prakāśa
14. Harinātha - on Kāvya darśa
- Mārjanā
on Sarasvatīkaṇṭhābharāṇa
15. Hariśaṅkara - Nāgeśvarī
- on Kāvya prakāśa
16. Jagaddhara - on Sarasvatīkaṇṭhābharāṇa
17. Jayarāma - on Kāvya prakāśa
18. Kalyāṇa Upādhyāya - on Kāvya prakāśa
19. Khuddī Jhā - on Kāvya prakāśa
20. Kṛṣṇamohana
Ṭhakkura - Lakṣmi
on Sāhityādarpaṇa
21. Madhusūdana
Ṭhakkura - on Kāvya prakāśa

22. Mahādeva Miśra - Rasodadhi
on Rasataranṅiṇī Bhānuprakāśinī
on Rasamañjarī
23. Maheśvara - on Kāvyālaṅkārasūtra
24. Manodhara - Kāvyadarpaṇa alias Ratnapāṇi on Kāvyaprakāśa
Ṭhakkura
25. Mukunda - on Kāvyaprakāśa
26. Murāri Miśra - on Kāvyaprakāśa
(S/o Śrīkr̥ṣṇa Miśra)
27. Nānyadeva - Sarasvatīhṛdayālaṅkāra on Nāṭyaśāstra
28. Narasiṁha - on Kāvyādarśa
29. Narasiṁha Ṭhakkara - Narasiṁha-manīṣā
- on Kāvyaprakāśa
30. Padmanābha Miśra - on Kāvyaprakāśa
31. Pakṣadhara Miśra - Kāvyaprakāśa alias Jayadeva on Kāvyaprakāśa
32. Paṇḍitarāja - on Kāvyaprakāśa
33. Rāmacandra Jhā - on Kāvyādośa on Kuvalayānanda
on Rudraṭālaṅkāra
34. Ratneśarva - on Kāvyaprakāśa
Ratnadarpaṇa
- on Sarasvatīkaṇṭhābharāṇa
35. Ravi Ṭhakkura - Madhumatī
on Kāvyaprakāśa
36. Rucikara Miśra - on Kāvyaprakāśa
37. Sahadeva - on Kāvyālaṅkārasūtra
38. Śitikanṭha - Nidarśana on Kāvyaprakāśa
39. Śrīdhara Ṭhakkura - Viveka on Kāvyaprakāśa

- | | |
|---------------------|---|
| 40. Subuddhi Miśra | - Tattvaparīkṣā on Kāvyaṇṇakāśa |
| | - Sāhityasarvasva on Kāvyaṇṇakarasūtra |
| 41. Surendra Jhā | - Snehavaṣiṇī on Kāvyaḍīpikā |
| 42. Taruṇavācaspati | - on Kāvyaḍarśa |
| 43. Veṇīdatta | - on Kāvyaṇṇakāśa |
| 44. Vijayānanda | - on Kāvyaḍarśa |
| 45. Viśvanātha | - on Kāvyaḍarśa |
| 46. Yaśodhara | - on Kāvyaṇṇakāśa |

6. PROSODY

HALĀYUDHA

The earliest writer on prosody hailing from Mithilā appears to be Halāyudha, the author of a commentary on the Piṅgalachandassūtra. The Brāhmaṇasarvasva is his famous work. Most of posterior writers of digests on Dharmaśāstra cite him and his work an authority. He is said to have flourished in the eleventh century A.D.

RAVIKARA MIŚRA

Ravikara Miśra of the Dīrghaghoṣa (Dighavaya)-family was an ancestor of Dāmodara Miśra, the author of the Vāṇībhūṣaṇa. Dāmodara, while illustrating the metre styled ratoddhatā refers to the high academic proficiency of his family in general and Ravikara in particular.¹

Ravikara is credited with the authorship of an original work on prosody, entitled Vṛttaratnāvalī and also a commentary on Prākṛtapiṅgalasūtra, styled piṅgalasāra vikāsinī.

DĀMODARA MIŚRA

Dāmodara was a court-poet of king Kīrtisīmha (1402-1410 A.D.)² and as such he can safely be assigned to the second half of the fourteenth and

1. cf. dīrghaghoṣakuladevadīrghikā-paṅkajam ravikaro uyarājata / īrṣaye 'va duhituḥ payonidher yatra vāsam akarot sarasvatī //.

2. cf. 'Kīrtisīmhanṛpa jīva' et. seq. (p.13 verse No 82).

the first quarter of the fifteenth century A.D. He composed Vāṇībhūṣaṇa,¹ a work on prosody.

HARIHARA

The Piṅgalarāṅgiṇī, a commentary on the Piṅgalachandassūtra is ascribed to Harihara.²

RAMĀPATI UDĀDHYĀYA

Ramāpati Upādhyāya, son of Kaviśekhara Yaśodhara of the Maṅgaraunī-branch of the Pālī-family, wrote *Vṛttasāra*³ and an auto commentary thereon *Vṛttasārāloka*⁴ by name. He is placed in the fifteenth century A.D. Padmanābha Miśra,⁵ son of Dāmodara Miśra of the Dighavaya-family wrote an independent treatise on prosody, entitled Chandoratna.⁶

GAṄGADĀSA

Gaṅgādāsa was the son of Vaidya Gopāladāsa. He was a Kāyastha. He composed Chandomañjarī, an original treatise on prosody. It is said to have flourished in the sixteenth century A.D.

-
1. Published, N.S.P., Bombay, 1925 (Kāvya-mālā - 53).
 2. Unpublished supplementary list of Mithilā manuscripts prepared by Bihar Research Society - Patna - Prosody - No 6.
 3. Vide Des. cat. Mss in Mithilā - vol. II Prosody - No 23; Unpublished list referred to above - No 17, 17A.
 4. ibid., No 24.
 5. For details vide supra p.12.
 6. Vide J.A.S.B., 1915, p.388.

Digambara Ṭhakkura¹ had written a work on prosody, entitled Vṛttarahasya. It has been referred to in his Virudāvalī.²

DURGĀDATTA MIŚRA

*Vṛttamuktāvalī*³ is the work on prosody composed by Durgādatta, "His time is not yet settled, but he cannot be placed earlier than the sixteenth century A.D.", says Singh.⁴ He is different from his name sake, a protege of Mahārāja Chatrasimha (1807-1839).

KĀLIDĀSA MIŚRA

One Kālidāsa Miśra, traditionally claimed to be a Maithila, composed Śruta-bodha consisting of 43 stanzas meant for providing an elementary knowledge of rhetoric and prosody to the beginner. Several scholars of Mithilā have written commentaries on it. Prominent among them are Manohara and Lakṣmīnārāyaṇa. The commentary of the former is called *Subodhini*⁵ and that of the latter Manoramā.⁶

MM. Gokulanātha Upādhyāya⁷ has two works

-
1. For details vide supra p.14.
 2. Vide ibid.
 3. Vide Des. Cat. of Mss in Mithilā - vol. II - Prosody - No 19; Unpublished list referred to above - Nos 14, 14A-C, vide also Mithila Research Institute Ms No 4813.
 4. Vide History of Tirhut - p.127.
 5. Vide Des. Cat. of Mss in Mithilā - Vol II Prosody No 26; Unpublished list referred to above Nos 22, 22A.
 6. Vide Unpublished list referred to above No 20.
 7. For details vide supra pp.22-25.

on prosody to his credit. They are Vṛttatarāṅgiṇī and Ekāvalī.

The Vṛttatarāṅgiṇī, as the author himself says, is very voluminous. It is terse and most difficult to understand without a thorough knowledge of different Śāstras.¹ Therefore, he composed Ekāvalī,² an abridged digest dealing with all the famous metres in a plain and simple style for people in general and those desirous of a deeper knowledge of the subject have been advised to consult his Vṛttatarāṅgiṇī.³

The Ekāvalī, composed with precious gems from the ocean of metrical treatises, is complete in three chapters, called ratna. The first deals with prastāra in addition to introductory notes; the second gives an account of mātrāvṛtta and the third discusses the Varṇāvṛtta.

MM. BHĪṢMA MIŚRA

MM. Bhīṣma Miśra was the son of Maho. Dhīra Miśra of the Narasāma-branch of the Baliāsa-family. He flourished in the eighteenth century A.D. He wrote an independent treatise on prosody, entitled Vṛttadarpaṇa.⁴

1. Vide Ekāvalī III verse No 55 (p.117).

2. ibid. verse No 56 (p.118).

3. Published, K.S.D.S. university, Darbhanga, 1985.

4. Vide Unpublished list of Mithila Mss. referred to above - Nos 13, 13A-E; Descriptive Cat. of Mss in Mithilā - vol. II - Prosody - No 18; A copy of the ms is preserved in the Mithila Research Institute, Darbhanga, No 3721.

RĀGHAVA JHĀ

Rāghava Jhā of village Taraurī, near Sakri Railway Station (NER) wrote the chandaḥ kalpataru.¹

VIDYĀNANDA MIŚRA

A commentary on the Piṅgalachandassūtra, styled *Vidvanmanoranā*² is ascribed to Vidyānanda Miśra.

JĀNAKĪNANDANA KAVĪNDRA

The *Vṛttadarpaṇa*³ is the name of the treatise on prosody written by Jānakīnandana kavindra.

KEŚAVA

One Keśava of Mithilā is said to have written Chandaḥ siddhāntabhāskara.

MADHUSŪDANA

Madhusūdana, traditionally believed to be a man from Mithilā, composed Mātrāvṛtta,⁴ a work on prosody.

1. Vide Des. Cat. of Mss Mithilā - Vol. II - Prosody - No 2.

2. Vide ibid. No 16.

3. Vide ibid. No 17; Unpublished list of Mithilā Mss referred to above - Nos 12, 12A and Mithila Research Institute Ms No 5033.

4. Vide Unpublished list of Mithilā Mss referred to above No 9. it is mentioned therein that the manuscript is in the possession of Madhusudana Miśra of village Haripura, P.O. Nehra.

CIRANĪJĪVA

One cirañjīva hailing from Mithilā composed the *Vṛttaratnāvalī*¹

MM. BABUJANA JHĀ

In the nineteenth century flourished MM. Babujana Jha, son of MM. Dīnabandhu alias Nenana Jhā of the Sukheta-branch of the Khanāla-family in village Pilakhavāra, near Madhubani. He composed a work on prosody, named Chandaḥśudhākara.²

VASANTA MIŚRA

In the same century Vasanta Miśra, an inhabitant of village Ṭabhakā, district Samastipur, wrote a treatise on prosody, entitled Chandelata.

1. Vide ibid. Nos 16, 16A-C.

2. Vide ibid. No 4.

आशुतोष अत्रस्थी

राष्ट्रिय

श्री नारायणराव विठ्ठल (१९००-१९८०)

Dr. Triloka Natha Jha, son of Late Smt. Indupriya Devi and Late Prof. Uma Natha Jha, born in 1934, completed his Honours Degree in English and M.A. in Sanskrit. He obtained his Ph.d. from Bihar University, served Bihar and L.N. Mithila Universities as a teacher for over 34 years and retired as Prof. and Head of Sanskrit Department.

Dr. Jha has edited several works, such as Śṛṅgāra-sāriṇī, Kavīndra gangā-nanda granthāvalī etc. and contributed over two dozen research papers to National and International conferences research journals etc. Authored a monograph on Śaṅkara Miśra, Dr. Jha is presently a Śāstracūdāmaṇi scholar of Rashtriya Sanskrit Sansthan.

RASHTRIYA SANSKRIT SANSTHAN

A-40, Vishal Enclave, Raja Garden,
New Delhi-110027 (INDIA)